FOOTBALL GALORE.

Grand Rapids Victorious in Two More Games.
On Saturday the football team from the Tomah Indian school came to this city and were beaten by the high school team by a score of 21 to 5. The Indian boys were outplayed at every point, their score of five being made by a clever drop kick from the field.

The weak points of the Indians' play was their slowness and inability to work together, as when the ball was batted to them they were unable to advance it before being downed and the same thing happened when the ball was snapped back, so that they often lost ground when the ball was in their possession.

The Indians were out classed, they played too high and had very little team work. The high school boys played fast ball from beginning to end. Only once during the game was their goal endangered and even then the Indians could not have scored on straight football. It was at this point that the Indian's full back Quinn made a pretty drop kick from the twenty-yard line, thus saving his team from being goose-egged.

During the first half Bunge and Fritzinger each scored a touchdown. Bunge succeeded in kicking one of two goals. A like number of touch downs were made in the second half by Brennan and Podawiltz.

It seemed to the spectators as a matter of course that the man with the ball was the one entitled to the laurels. This is in a sense erroneous. When a signal was given, every man in the team knew the exact part he was to perform in the execution of the play. It is this kind of co-operation that enabled the runner to make his gain.

The Indians seem a gentlemanly lot of young fellows and spoke very highly of their treatment here and of the Grand Rapids team, saying that they had secured some good pointers from the game which they hoped to put into practice later on in the season. Following is the lineup of the two teams:

Substitutes—Jerome Lookaround, Doc Tibbitts, Moses Kanote. Officials—Supt. Hambrecht and Rev. Kroll.

Timekeepers—Kellogg and Lookaround.

Marshfield Vs. Grand Rapids.
On Sunday Co. A team came down from Marshfield and in spite of a continuous drizzling rain they played a game against the Locals which resulted in a victory for Grand Rapids by a score of 23 to 0.

The game was a repetition of the one played at Marshfield two weeks ago and the players from up there were no match for the home team. The boys in company A team are willing and anxious to put up a good game but they lack a whole lot of science that the Grand Rapids boys have acquired by years of practice at the game.

In the first half Raath made a touchdown and in the second half Loe, McCarthy and Fritzinger each made one and goal was missed once, which made the score 23. Following is the lineup:

Where it was possible to get between this city and Marshfield on Sunday, it is probable that more games would be played. In order to reach here last Sunday the Marshfield boys took the train to Junction city and then drove down from there.

Concerning the Street Ry.

Stevens Point Gazette: D. O. Fisher, the interurban street car promoter, was in the city today. The time for filing a $2,000 cash bond for the faithful performance of the contract, expires on the 20th inst., next Sunday. This money has not as yet been deposited in the Citizens National bank by Mr. Fisher or the Wisconsin Valley Lightening and Power company, as the resolution extending the time requires, and from present indications it will not be. The cause of this, Mr. Fisher states, is that the capitalist who is mainly interested in the enterprise, is sick in New York and it will be impossible for him to reach here this week. If the time was again extended until the last of the month, or only eleven days, he says it would be all he asks, as he would then be in a position to meet the demands of the city. To give this extension a special meeting of the council must be held, but Mayor Caslin stated to the Gazette representative this morning that he did not believe it was right, considering the fact that a previous extension had been made, and if the present franchise fails there are other parties who are anxious to get the privilege of building a street car line.

Sentenced to Waupun.

Last week Judge Webb sentenced the three men to Waupun, who were found guilty by the jury during the week. William Smith was given one year, William Ellis two years and Nicholas Coon two years. Sheriff McLaughlin left with his men for the state prison on Thursday and placed them behind the bars.

Entertained at Whist.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Fournier entertained a party at whist Tuesday evening, four tables being played. A very social and pleasant three hours were spent by those present, and when the merits were counted up it was found that M. McCarthy had led all competitors by a number of points and was presented with a handsome bound volume in recognition of his skill. Mrs. J. J. Looze lead the ladies with points and received a piece of hand painted china, while Mrs. D. M. Huntington triumphantly carried off the consolation prize. Refreshments were served between eleven and twelve.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Davis, Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Looze, Mr. and Mrs. Will Gross, Mr. and Mrs. M. McCarthy, Mrs. D. M. Huntington, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Fritzinger, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Bogger and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Drumb.

SANTIAGO'S FALL.

Vividly Portrayed by Local Talent at the Opera House.

Two well filled houses greeted the production of the "Spanish American Conflict at Santiago" at the opera house on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and so far as can be learned nobody was disappointed by the efforts of the amateurs. The cast seemed to be most happily chosen all through, and each one through his greatest effort into the part in order to make it effective.

E. A. Upham as Captain Hutton was especially good and had apparently taken great pains to study and interpret his role properly, and his sayings and manner of delivery received much applause. Bert Bever as Phil Bassett, the wronged clerk and the captain's friend was also worthy of mention.

Marcellus McCarthy as Milton Merry the bashful lover, acted his part to perfection and was most beautifully aided and abetted by his sweetheart, Bess Walton, which part was taken by Miss Eva Denarais and who was not afflicted with the same diffidence that affected the male portion of the couple.

Edward Daly in the capacity of Dr. Harrison carried quite a professional air with him, while W. A. Slingeland in the parts of Elmer Walton and Antonio Carlos, especially the latter, was good.

George Labreche as the negro butler and Chas. Larnie as the Irish coachman furnished laughter for the audience whenever they made their appearance and came in for their share of applause.

Bertha Podawiltz as Cora Bassett and Aurelia Bandelin as Yosobel Carlos, red cross nurses, entered into the spirit of the play with all their talent and did finely all the way through. Joseph Peyruse as Lient. Christobel was also good. In fact, some thought that Mr. Peyruse was the best in the lot and he certainly did handle his part well at every point.

The red cross nurse drill by eighteen young ladies showed a great deal of care in the preparation and the young ladies made a very pretty picture in the evolutions.

The Grand Army Post is certainly to be congratulated in their success in getting up and handling the affair so nicely. After the play a large number remained and danced to the strains of the Monarch orchestra.

The members of the company are figuring on taking the show to Merrill on Tuesday, the 29th instant, if arrangements can be made.

NEW OFFICE IN COUNTY.

Supervisor of Assessors to be Elected by the County Board.

At the next meeting of the county board of supervisors to be held in November, a new officer will be elected in accordance with a law passed at the last session of the state legislature. The office is that known as county supervisor of assessment.

Duties of Supervisor.

The duties and the powers of the supervisor of assessment are such that he has complete supervision and direction of the work of the assessors of the cities, villages and towns in the county. He is also required to call a meeting of all such assessors on or before the last Tuesday in April for conference and instruction, relative to the duties of such officers in the valuation and assessment of all kinds and classes of property. The supervisor is also required to visit each city, town and village once or more each year and examine all the books, papers and records pertaining to the assessments so as to secure full and accurate knowledge of property in the several assessment districts under his supervision.

Another duty which devolves upon the supervisor of assessment is to examine the work of each assessor during the time of the work and shall have the power to personally assess different classes and kinds of property previously assessed by the assessors so that he may ascertain whether such assessor is assessing property at its full valuation or if he is omitting from the roll property subject to taxation. The supervisor shall also have all the rights of the regular assessor for examination of persons and property and for the discovery of property subject to taxation. It is also the duty of the supervisor, if he finds any such omissions, to report them to the assessors of that district and if it be not rectified, he shall report the same to the county board in writing for its action. The law also provides that the supervisor shall make a report in writing to the county board before its annual meeting giving in detail the work of each of the assessors in the county, and if any, the failure of such assessors or property owners to comply with the law. This report shall also show the true value of all property in the county and all other information and statistics as may be of assistance to the board in its equalization of assessment among the various cities, villages and towns in the county.

The law also gives the board of supervisors the authority, if it deems wise, to direct the supervisor to make a re-assessment of all property in the district or county. The supervisors of assessment shall be under the supervision and direction of the state tax commission and all the officers of that class in the state will hold a meeting in the month of February of each year for a conference upon the subject of taxation, the administration of the laws and the instruction of such officers in their duties. The actual expense of the supervisor at such meeting shall be paid by county. The supervisor shall hold his office for a term of three years from the first Monday in January following the election.

Pay of Supervisor.

The rate of compensation fixed by the law is that the county board may fix (the rate of compensation, but it shall not be more than four dollars a day for every day actually employed, which amount shall include all his expenses. The county board may authorize the supervisor to appoint one or more deputies whose compensation and term of office shall be fixed by the county board but which shall not exceed that of the supervisor. Another law passed at the same session provides that any assessor who shall receive any reward or other gift which may be construed as a bribe shall be subject to a fine of not more than $500 or by imprisonment for a period of time not to exceed five years. It also provides that any person offering such bribe shall be punished, the penalty being the same. The law provides that any assessor who shall intentionally fix the value of any property assessed by him at less or more than the true value thereof prescribed by law for the valuation of the same, or shall intentionally omit from assessment any property liable to taxation in his assessment district, or shall otherwise intentionally violate or fail to perform any duty imposed upon him by law relating to the assessment of property for taxation, shall forfeit to the state not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars.

MONUMENTS TO PRESIDENTS.

Heads of the Nation Honored After Death—Imposing Memorials for Washington, Lincoln, Grant, Garfield and Others.

THESE is no doubt that a splendid monument will be erected in honor of the late President McKinley, as a shrine at which American love and loyalty will pay devotion during coming generations. Friends of the martyred President have already begun the collection of funds for a memorial to be raised over his remains at Canton and hope to collect $500,000. It is safe to assume that the monument will be a noble structure—a fit companion for the memorials to Washington, Lincoln, Grant and Garfield.

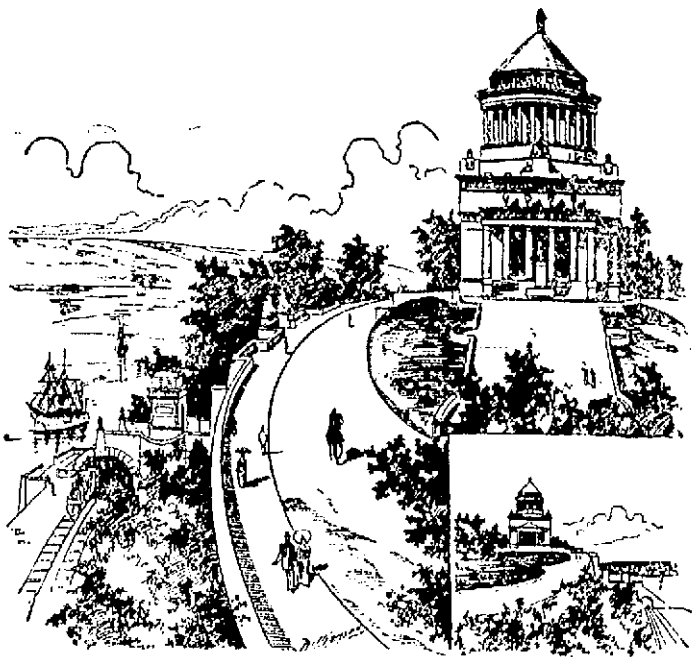

These are the Presidents best beloved of the people, and their memories are enshrined in the most imposing of shafts and mausoleums. Jackson was a rugged and martial character, but he is chiefly represented by equestrian statues. The graves of many of the Presidents are marked only by simple marble stones or modest shafts. John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, rest in vaults under the portico of First Church at Quincy, Mass., and their burial places are indicated by tablets in the church. Tyler is a fit subject for a philosopher's homily, for tons for the iron framework. The foundation weighs 30,912 tons, making a total of about $1,000 tons. The top of the monument can be reached by elevator or stairs. This mighty shaft has often been struck by lightning, and it sways several inches out of plumb during severe storms.

each representing a State, the name of which is carved on the shaft. At the south side of the obelisk is a square pedestal seven feet high, supporting the statue of Lincoln, the pedestal being ornamented with the coat of arms of the United States.

Garfield Memorial.

The Garfield memorial is a massive structure of native Ohio sandstone. It stands on an eminence in Lake View Cemetery in the suburbs of the city of Cleveland. Its base is a square structure which is surmounted by a round tower with a conical top. The tower is 50 feet in diameter and its top is 180 feet from the ground. The porch at its base is decorated by a frieze divided into five sections, the figures in which are life-size. The central section rep-

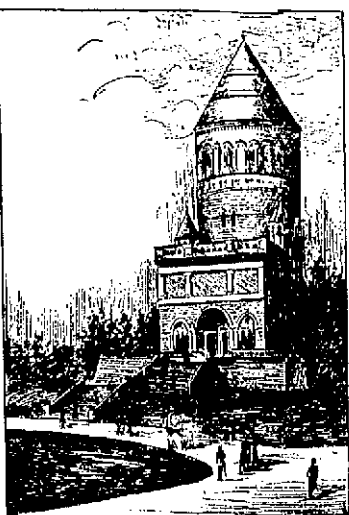

GRANT'S TOMB.

The nation's tribute, erected on Riverside drive, New York, to the Silent Man of Galena.

The Lincoln monument at Springfield, Ill., was dedicated in 1874. The memorial, which cost $250,000, is constructed of brick and Quincy granite, the latter only showing on the outer surfaces. There is a base about 72 feet square and 16 feet high. At the north side of the base is a semi-circular projection, which contains the vestibule of the entrance and gives access to view the crypts containing the remains of Lincoln and his wife and children. A projection on the south side contains a memorial hall in elliptical form. The length of the base from north to south, including the two projections, is about 120 feet, and in the angles formed by the projections are flights of stairs guarded by granite balustrades and rising to the terrace above the entrance. Upon this terrace is surmounted another structure composed of the base of the shaft and four pedestals at the corners, the pedestals reaching a height of 12 feet above the terrace. From resents Garfield as an orator. Others picture him as a teacher, soldier and President, and the fifth shows his figure lying in state in the rotunda of the capitol at Washington. Inside this square structure is a memorial hall. It is circular in form and is surrounded by a vaulted corridor or vestibule. A place was provided in the center of this shrine for a marble statue of the dead President beneath a dome supported by pillars of dark red polished granite and inlaid with Venetian glass mosaic on a gold ground. The memorial hall is richly decorated with stained glass, mosaic and colored marbles. A professional frieze of mourning figures bringing tributes of love and respect, executed in marble mosaic, encircles the hall just above the arches.

A professional frieze of mourning figures bringing tributes of love and respect, executed in marble mosaic, encircles the hall just above the arches.

The Grant Monument.

New York's finest memorial is President Grant's tomb, a testimonial of love and gratitude from the whole people. It has a beautiful site on Riverside drive, one of the highest points on Manhattan Island. It faces the everlasting Palisades, and overlooks the Hudson River for many miles. The monument is of white granite. Its main feature is the memorial hall, which is surmounted by a cylindrical structure terminating with a colossal statue in bronze. On the south side is a Doric portico, rising about two-thirds the height of the main structure, with a flat entablature intended for statuary. On the other three sides are columns against a blank wall. At the angles of the base are square pedestals for sculpture.

JUDGE LEFT CASE TO LAWYER.

and the Attorney Decided Against His Own Client.

The importance of the justice of the case is more felt the farther in from the stir of towns. In cities this office, though it is important and dignified, does not receive the recognition that it should, but out in the country the justice is a big man, his decisions are generally final and his opinion is eagerly sought. One, however, his knowledge of the law is a little deficient.

In a little town in middle Georgia there lived a lawyer, says the Atlanta Constitution, who has since made his name famous through the South for eloquence, knowledge of the law and practical sense. At this time he had almost reached the stage where he could afford to stop practicing in justice courts, and to clinch this resolution he had determined to accept no more practice for any fee under $20.

One day a lady came into his office and informed him that she had a case in a court about ten miles out in the country, and that she wanted him to take it for her. The subject of contention was a cow. He told her of his fee, thinking to get rid of her in this manner. From somewhere in her dress she pulled out some bills, counted over $20 and told him that he had to go. Still wishing to find a hole through which to escape, he inquired as to the value of the cow. She answered $15. He then asked about the case, and when she had finished her story he informed her that she had the wrong side of it and that whether he went out or not she would lose it. Nothing would change her determination, however; she wanted to law it out and he had to go.

On the day appointed the lawyer drove out to court, having shut up his office for the day, and on his arrival there found everything in readiness for the trial. The witnesses were examined and the counsel for the other side made its plea. The evidence was against him, but he determined to do the best for the old lady and to rattle the other lawyer if he could. He commenced his speech, mixed up all the law he had ever heard of, rattled the other lawyer, rattled the witnesses, shifted about their testimony to please himself and utterly confused the justice, who looked on in amazement, unable to decide the case. When the speech was over the judge said:

"Well, I will leave the case with you. If you really believe that your client should have the cow, upon your honor as a gentleman, I will give it to her."

The lawyer was surprised, and by no means desiring to lose the cow for his client, said:

"Judge, you are the judge in this case. I am not. I am merely expressing the opinion of my client."

The judge insisted on an answer; so he was obliged to reply that he did not think his client had any right to the animal and the case was decided.

Strange to say, the client was not angry, but agreed that under the circumstances he had done all that he could. It was merely her desire to law it out that had brought on the difficulty.

WONDERFUL LEAP BY A HORSE.

Frightened Mare Jumps Clear Over a Full-Sized Freight Car.

While working near Green River, Wyo., a Union Pacific repair gang had its cars set on a spur, and all around the spot on both sides of the track was fine pasture for the work horses. One morning while the men were rounding up the horses the bunch took fright at something just as they were started toward the camp. In a wild rush they swooped down on the corral, and one mare, which seemed to have been thoroughly frenzied, dashed directly toward the train. Some of the men, seeing the fright of the animal, tried to turn her, but she went on, heedless of the obstruction.

"I was standing in front of the boarding car," said Charles Anderson, "and felt sure she would butt out my brains against the car. Just as she reached the edge of the shallow cut at which the cars stood she stopped an instant, firmly planted her feet in the ground, and gave one mighty leap. The car was cleared as cleanly and perfectly as though the animal had been a trained English hurdle horse instead of a common hobo on a grade team."

"The car she leaped over was a standard-gauge flat, loaded with steel rails. The tank from which she started was not more than six inches above the ties, and the other side was lower. Apparently the animal was not injured by her wild leap. The foreman of the gang saw her make the leap and bought her from the man who owned her, and says he proposes to keep her for a family pet because of her feat. She is apparently of Canadian copper-bottom stock and weighs about 1,650 pounds."

A Club.

Yellowly—What! Are you going home already?

Brownly—Yes; I must go. Wife is waiting up for me.

Yellowly—My wife belongs to a woman's club, and when she goes out to it in an afternoon, I never say a word if she stays away six hours, so she never says anything to me if I am out a little later than usual. Don't your wife belong to a club?

Brownly—No, but there's a club that belongs to her, and it is the knowledge of that fact that is hurrying me home.

From the "Oil to Society."

Marmaduke—How do you feel about this much-discussed man-with-the-hoe?

Courtney—Oh! He's all right. In three generations he will be the man-with-the-tallyho.—Puck.

Few things make a poorer appearance than the kin at an average wedding.

BECOMING A REPORTER.

A Bit of Experience in the Life of an Immigrant to America.

Things enough happened to take down my self-esteem a good many pegs. It was about this time I made up my mind to go into the newspaper business. It seemed to me that a reporter's was the highest and noblest of all callings. No one could sift wrong from right as he, and punish the wrong. In that I was right. I have not changed my opinion on that point one whit, and I would rather die a good reporter than a millionaire. The power of fact is the mightiest lever of this or of any day. The reporter has his hand upon it, and it is his grievous fault if he does not use it well. I thought I would make a good reporter. My father had edited our local newspaper, and such little help as I had been to him had given me a taste for the business. Being of that mind, I went to the Courier office one morning and asked for the editor. He was not in. Apparently nobody was. I wandered through room after room, all empty, until at last I came to one in which sat a man with a paste-pot and a pair of long shears. This must be the editor. He had the implements of his trade. I told him my errand while he clipped away.

"What is it you want?" he asked, when I had ceased speaking and waited for an answer.

"Work," I said.

"Work!" said he, waving he laughily away with the shears. "We don't work here. This is a newspaper office."

I went, abashed. I tried the Express next. This time I had the editor pointed out to me. He was just coming through the business office. At the door I stopped him and preferred my request. He looked me over, a hul fresh from the shipyard, with horny hands and a rough coat, and asked:

"What are you?"

"A carpenter," I said.

The man turned upon his heel, with a loud, rasping laugh, and shut the door in my face. For a moment I stood there stunned. His ascending steps on the stairs brought back my senses. I ran to the door and flung it open. "You laugh!" I shouted, shaking my fist at him, standing half way up the stairs. "You laugh now, but wait!"—And then I got the grip of my temper and slammed the door in my turn. All the same, in that hour it was settled that I was to be a reporter. I knew it as I went out in the street.—Jacob Rits in The Outlook.

GONE TO BE A CELESTIAL BRIDE.

Death of Mrs. Brigham Young, "Eternity" Wife of Joseph Smith.

Mrs. Zina D. Young, the most noted of the wives of Brigham Young, the famous Mormon apostle, died recently at Salt Lake City, Utah.

She was born in Waterbury, N. Y., in 1821, and at 15 became a convert to the doctrines of Mormonism, going directly to the settlement of Kirtland, Ohio. Here her devotion to her

Mrs. Zina D. Young religion was so great that she was entrusted with a part of the mysteries of the temple. While there she told of a vision in which she had seen an angel and been invested with the "gift of tongues and interpretation," the power to speak in language used only by the chosen ones of God, and to understand this strange speech.

She married one of Smith's converts, and two children were born to them. She deserted them at Nauvoo, Ill., when Joseph Smith had a "revelation" that she had been set aside for him as wife for "time and eternity." She was sealed to the prophet as a plural wife, and was his favorite until he was killed by a mob in Illinois.

Brigham Young, who then had several wives, had a "revelation" that she should be sealed to him for "time." She followed Brigham Young in the eventful journey from Illinois to the Salt Lake valley in the late 40's. She trudged behind wagons, slept in tents, cooked for the travelers and bore many hardships, entering the "New Zion" with the first settlers. After the death of Brigham Young she lived in Salt Lake City. She was always an earnest advocate of polygamy.

Only four of the widows of Brigham Young now survive. They live in Salt Lake City.

Curiosity in Books.

The most remarkable book in the world so far as its appearance is concerned is neither written nor printed. It is in the Imperial library of Paris and the letters are cut out of tissue paper with a pair of scissors. A sheet of blue tissue, in which the letters are cut, is placed between two pages of white, and so the matter is read.

Old Peruvian Roads.

The Incas of Peru built very fine roads, one system of which traversed the plateau, the other followed the seacoast north and south. The seacoast road is said to have been from 1,500 to 2,000 miles in length and twenty feet in breadth. Many portions of this magnificent system of roads are still fit for use.

Aids to German Trade.

Germany has now expert commercial attaches at New York, Buenos Ayres, Constantinople and St. Petersburg. The services of these gentlemen, who are attached to the consulates general and not to the embassies, have proved very valuable to German trade interests.

Babcock on Steel.

Just at the present time Representative Babcock is receiving more newspaper notoriety in Wisconsin than any other man. One day some republican newspaper comes out with a lengthy interview from that gentleman in which he tells just where his position is on the tariff matter, and the next day some other republican sheet comes out with a lengthy editorial explaining what Mr. Babcock meant and what he did not mean in his interview of the day before. It would seem to an intelligent man that these explanations were entirely unnecessary. When Mr. Babcock is interviewed he explains his stand without hesitation and in language so plain that any man can understand it.

He maintains that the tariff on steel billets is so high that it prevents the foreign manufacturer from competing with domestic manufacturers in any way. As a consequence the American manufacturer is able to control the home market and sell his product at a price that robs those who have to buy from him. This is naturally a decidedly wrong condition of affairs, and Mr. Babcock wants to right matters by reducing the tariff on this particular product. The Chicago Record-Herald, a republican paper says:

"A tariff such as that on steel is simply indefensible. It falls clearly within the inhibition implied in a description by the congressman which may be adopted as a very good guide for the first steps in tariff reform. 'When any article,' he says, 'can be manufactured in the United States cheaper than anywhere else and is an article of export, the duty produces no revenue and affords no protection, but simply enables those who secure control to make such prices as they see fit in the domestic market up to a point where it can be imported.' People who believe in a tariff for revenue with incidental protection and those who believe in a tariff for protection with incidental revenue have a common interest in opposing a tariff of this sort, which resolves itself simply into a tariff for squeezing this public."

The Record Herald is honest enough to admit that the existing tariff allows the manufacturer to rob the people and it would seem that no explanation of Mr. Babcock's action would be necessary from the republican press. Mr. Babcock is trying to accomplish the same thing that the democratic party has tried to do for years. Let us hope that he will not stop at the steel trust.

He Defends Athletics.

"Athletics tend to keep the boys out of vice. I would rather have a son brought home dead from a football field than brought home drunk from a saloon. Athletics use up the superfluous energies of the students and at night they feel more like going to bed than running about town with the rougher element. The danger from broken bones is much less than that which comes from spending the energies in smoking, drinking and other vice."

Such was the statement of C. C. Parlin, principal of the Wausau High school, who spoke on a subject of especial interest to young men, at the teachers' convention at Oshkosh Friday afternoon. His topic was, "The Working of the Wisconsin System of Control in High School Athletic Contests." The basis of the system as stated by Mr. Parlin is that there is a board of control elected by the High school principals of the state. This board has charge of all school athletic contests where the schools are members of the board of control. No school can contest with a school not connected with the association without a special permit from the board. Those students who participate in the contests must be up in their studies, must take full work and must be under 21 years of age. Mr. Parlin endorsed the present system with the provision that one of the teachers should be always with the boys while they are training, or they will fool away their time instead of training properly. He said that an athletic contest stands for training.

Appreciates Her Recovery.

To whom it may concern: It gives me much pleasure to add my testimonial to the many others who have been cured by Drs. M. E. and B. V. Prentiss now at Dixon house. I was suffering from a severe throat trouble which had been pronounced consumption as I coughed and had several hemorrhages and most of the time could not speak above a whisper. After taking a course of their magnetic treatments I can say that I am completely cured. I wish to state also that I witnessed the miraculous cure of Mr. Meddaugh, of this place, in a single treatment. I earnestly advise any who are in need of such professional services to give them a trial.

Married.

A home wedding around which considerable interest has centered, took place last evening at the home of Mrs. Mary Johnson, when her daughter, Ellen Margaret, was united in marriage to Mr. Royal J. Havenor.

The house was decorated with smilax and cut flowers and represented a very pretty appearance. About forty relatives and friends were present to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. J. K. Reynolds of this city. Promptly at eight o'clock, to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Anna Larsen, the bride couple descended the stair, accompanied by their attendants, Wayne Miller and Miss Jessie Harmon and took their places in the bow window where the ceremony was performed. The bride was becomingly attired in white silk and carried bride's roses and the bridesmaid wore white organdie and carried pink carnations. After congratulations were received, an elegant wedding supper was served.

The bridegroom is a worthy young man and for the past three years has been in the drug store of C. H. Truesdell. The bride is a graduate of our high school, being one of the class of '98, and has been a popular clerk in Nielsen Bros.' dry goods store since that time. Both young people are deservedly popular and they have the best wishes of their many friends for a long and happy life. They left on the early morning train for a brief trip to Chicago and on their return will take up their residence with Mrs. Havenor's mother, Mrs. Mary Johnson on State street.—Waupaca Post.

Mr. and Mrs. Havenor are expected here Saturday evening to spend a few days.

Lost a Cow.

During the past summer John B. Arpin had one of his cows down in the marsh country for the purpose of supplying the men on the dredge with milk. Some time ago the cow got away and although a vigorous search was made, nothing could be found of the bovine. Later another and more thorough search was made and the cow's hide was found in a butcher shop at Babcock, where some person had sold it. It was apparent that some person had found the animal and knowing it was a stranger in those parts had killed the cow and probably used the meat and sold the hide. As the cow was a nice fat animal, John was somewhat put out about the matter, and it is probable that the culprit will be brought to justice.

Across the River.

The Messrs. Kautson, who had been doing the submarine work on the water pipes across the river, started in on their work again on Monday and put in the last length that connected the two shores on Friday. No difficulties were encountered on the west bank of the river anything like the east side, as it was possible to cut a channel for the pipe with the aid of a stream of water from the hydrant. This was much easier than blasting through solid granite, as was the case on the east side. All of the work on the mains has been moving forward at a rapid pace during the past week.

Working the Farmers.

From LaCrosse Chronicle: Three smooth young men have succeeded in working a number of rich farmers in this vicinity out of various sums by "selling" them the right to sell and act as agents for a wire fence machine. Bert Smith, a farmer near West Salem put up $144 for an agency and many others put up smaller amounts. It turns out that when the farmers signed the contract they were in reality signing a note for a large amount on the bank. Later the smooth trio disappeared with the money. Many farmers have a large stock of the fence machines, which by the way are almost worthless, and the men have escaped.

The New Northern Wisconsin

Not so many years ago Northern Wisconsin was only known as a vast lumber camp. In this region the choppers and sawyers of the day rapidly turned the tall pine into building material. Then came the development of the mining industry and as time sped on manufacturers and farmers turned their eyes to the New North. They saw many opportunities for getting rich with the aid of the fine soil, the varieties of trees, iron ore, clay, kaolin and marl and now the busy hum of machinery in the shop and the work of the reaper on the farm plainly indicates prosperity. Although this country is rapidly settling, there are still plenty of opportunities, as land is cheap and can be purchased on easy terms. Transportation facilities are of the very best for

Dr. and Mrs. D. A. Telfer arranged a surprise for their niece, Edna Muir, on Monday afternoon, by inviting a number of her young friends to their residence. It was Miss Edna's fourteenth birthday and a very pleasant evening was spent by the young folks.

Mr. Fandrick expects to move to Tomahawk in the near future.

Mr. Krieger will probably secure a lot on which to move the building and then fix it up for a store and repair shop and occupy the same with his stock of bicycles and sporting goods. The shop will be fitted out with a full outfit of machinery for doing repair work of all kinds.

N. Reiland has had placed in his meat market on the east side a four horsepower electric motor which runs his sausage cutting machine. Mr. Reiland has heretofore used a steam engine for this purpose and he speaks very highly in favor of the change. No doubt other motors for light work will be put in about the city as the handiness of electric power for light work becomes better known.

—A new remedy for biliousness is now on sale at Johnson & Hill Co.'s drug store. It is called Chamberlain's stomach and liver tablets. It gives quick relief and will prevent the attack if given as soon as the first indication of the disease appears. Price, 25 cents per box. Samples free. Johnson & Hill Co. has them.

Some of the youngsters on the west side have been amusing themselves by fastening "tic-tacs" on houses about town and thereby greatly annoying the inhabitants. Officer Kellogg says he has the names of the culprits but does not want to make any arrests provided they will discontinue the alleged sport at once. This is lots of fun for the boys, but it does not amuse the old folks to such an extent as it might.

Pot hunters have discovered a new way to carry on their work of killing game to sell. They get out licenses for their little children, each then being entitled to take a certain number, and thus the "old man" gets in a good stroke of business, going to market with his children and their licenses, and selling his partridges for $1 each, and no car fare to pay for the children. Quite smart, you bet.—Neillsville Times.

While engaged in digging the ditch for the waterworks pipe on the east side, one of the workmen unearthed a Mexican silver dollar at a depth of several feet. The piece of money had undoubtedly lain there for many years, as it was corroded and black with age and bore the date of 1831. Old residents here can remember when there was considerable Mexican silver in circulation, it being accepted at a considerable discount. J. L. Whitney secured the piece of money as a keepsake.

The editor of the Hometown (Iowa) Advocate claims that his town has three of the stingiest men on record. The first will not drink as much water as he wants unless it comes from a neighbor's well. The second forbids any of his family writing anything but a small hand, as it is a waste of ink to make large letters. The third stops the clock at night to save the wear and tear on machinery. All of them refused to take a newspaper on the ground that it is such a terrible strain on the spectacles to read.

Question Answered.
Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac.

Herman Hackbarth, our town clerk, delivered the new school library books last week. If the present law, making it obligatory with every school district to purchase a certain number of books each year, remains in force much longer large school libraries will be common. District No. 3 has two bookcases, and a third one will soon be needed. District No. 1 has 184 library books, there being no room in the bookcase for the new books.

Many farmers have still a good share of their potatoes to dig. Recent rains have greatly set them back in this work, not only by keeping them out of the field, but by retarding their work while digging as well. Yet as the rains have not been followed by warm weather the potatoes do not rot in the ground, and most likely all of them will be secured before the frost can do them any harm.

The ground is almost too wet to plow and there is no need of new points on the plows. All those who are not done with digging potatoes and husking corn are beginning to feel uneasy.

The creamery man pulled stakes for the season, which gives the cheese factory a much needed lift. Twenty cents they pay now for a pound of butter fat.

He is now getting along as well as could be expected, under the careful treatment of Dr. Houghton.

Walter Shumway brought in a half bushel of potatoes last Thursday which were a little the finest of anything that has been shown here this fall. Most of them weighed from one and one-half to two and three-fourths pounds. ### FOOTBALL GALORE.

Grand Rapids Victorious in Two More Games.

On Saturday the football team from the Tomah Indian school came to this city and were beaten by the high school team by a score of 21 to 5. The Indian boys were outplayed at every point, their score of five being made by a clever drop kick from the field.

The weak points of the Indians' play was their slowness and inability to work together, as when the ball was batted to them they were unable to advance it before being downed and the same thing happened when the ball was snapped back, so that they often lost ground when the ball was in their possession.

The Indians were out classed, they played too high and had very little team work. The high school boys played fast ball from beginning to end. Only once during the game was their goal endangered and even then the Indians could not have scored on straight football. It was at this point that the Indian's full back Quinay made a pretty drop kick from the twenty-yard line, thus saving his team from being goose-crged.

During the first half Bunge and Fritzsinger each scored a touchdown. Bunge succeeded in kicking one of two goals. A like number of touch downs were made in the second half by Brennan and Podawiltz.

It seemed to the spectators as a matter of course that the man with the ball was the one entitled to the laurels. This is in a sense erroneous. When a signal was given, every man in the team knew the exact part he was to perform in the execution of the play. It is this kind of co-operation that enabled the runner to make his gain.

The Indians seem a gentlemanly lot of young fellows and spoke very highly of their treatment here and of the Grand Rapids team, saying that they had secured some good pointers from the game which they hoped to put into practice later on in the season. Following is the lineup of the two teams:

Grand Rapids.
 Jos. Quaderer, center.
 Robt. Grignon, right guard.

Marshfield Vs. Grand Rapids.
 On Sunday Co. A team came down from Marshfield and in spite of a continuous drizzling rain they played a game against the Locals which resulted in a victory for Grand Rapids by a score of 23 to 0.

The game was a repetition of the one played at Marshfield two weeks ago and the players from up there were no match for the home team. The boys in company A team are willing and anxious to put up a good game but they lack a whole lot of science that the Grand Rapids boys have acquired by years of practice at the game.

In the first half Raath made a touchdown and in the second half Love, McCarthy and Fritzsinger each made one and goal was missed once, which made the score 23. Following is the lineup:

R. G. Kelley, L. G., Podawiltz, L. T., Baker, R. T., Bunge, L. E., Daley, R. E., McCamley, O. B., McCarthy, F. B., Raath, L. H., Fritzsinger, R. H., Love.

Were it possible to get between this city and Marshfield on Sunday, it is probable that more games would be played. In order to reach here last Sunday the Marshfield boys took the train to Junction city and then drove down from there.

Concerning the Street Ry.

Stevens Point Gazette: D. O. Fisher, the interurban street car promoter, was in the city today. The time for filing a $2,000 cash bond for the faithful performance of the contract, expires on the 20th inst., next Sunday. This money has not as yet been deposited in the Citizens National bank by Mr. Fisher or the Wisconsin Valley Lighthouse and Power company, as the resolution extending the time requires, and from present indications it will not be. The cause of this, Mr. Fisher states, is that the capitalist who is mainly interested in the enterprise, is sick in New York and it will be impossible for him to reach here this week. If the time was again extended until the last of the month, or only eleven days, he says it would be all he asks, as he would then be in a position to meet the demands of the city. To give this extension a special meeting of the council must be held, but Mayor Cashin stated to the Gazette representative this morning that he would not call a meeting, that he did not believe it was right, considering the fact that a previous extension had been made, and if the present franchise falls there are other parties who are anxious to get the privilege of building a street car line.

Sentenced to Waupun.

Entertained at Whist.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Fournier entertained a party at whist Tuesday evening, four tables being played. A very social and pleasant three hours were spent by those present, and when the merits were counted up it was found that M. McCarthy had led all competitors by a number of points and was presented with a handsome bound volume in recognition of his skill. Mrs. J. J. Looze lead the ladies with points and received a piece of hand painted china, while Mrs. D. M. Huntington triumphantly carried off the consolation prize. Refreshments were served between eleven and twelve.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Davis, Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Looze, Mr. and Mrs. Will Gross, Mr. and Mrs. M. McCarthy, Mrs. D. M. Huntington, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Fritzsinger, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Bogoger and Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Drumb.

SANTIAGO'S FALL.

Vividly Portrayed by Local Talent at the Opera House.

Two well filled houses greeted the production of the "Spanish American Conflict at Santiago" at the opera house on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, and so far as can be learned nobody was disappointed by the efforts of the amateurs. The cast seemed to be most happily chosen all through, and each one through his greatest effort into the part in order to make it effective.

E. A. Upham as Captain Hutton was especially good and had apparently taken great pains to study and interpret his role properly, and his sayings and manner of delivery received much applause. Bert Bever as Phil Bassett, the wronged clerk and the captain's friend was also worthy of mention.

Marcellus McCarthy as Milton Merry the basifull lover, acted his part to perfection and was most beautifully aided and abetted by his sweetheart, Bess Walton, which part was taken by Miss Eva Demaris and who was not afflicted with the same diffidence that affected the male portion of the couple.

Edward Daly in the capacity of Dr. Harrison carried quite a professional air with him, while W. A. Slingeland in the parts of Elmer Walton and Antonio Carlos, especially the latter, was good.

George Labreche as the negro butler and Chas. Larnie as the Irish coachman furnished laughter for the audience whenever they made their appearance and came in for their share of applause.

Bertha Podawiltz as Cora Bassett and Aurelia Bandelin as Yosobel Carlos, red cross nurses, entered into the spirit of the play with all their talent and did finely all the way through. Joseph Peyruse as Lieut. Christobel was also good. In fact, some thought that Mr. Peyruse was the best in the lot and he certainly did handle his part well at every point.

The red cross nurse drill by eighteen young ladies showed a great deal of care in the preparation and the young ladies made a very pretty picture in the evolutions.

The Grand Army Post is certainly to be congratulated in their success in getting up and handling the affair so nicely. After the play a large number remained and danced to the strains of the Monarch orchestra.

The members of the company are figuring on taking the show to Merrill on Tuesday, the 29th instant, if arrangements can be made.

NEW OFFICE IN COUNTY.

Supervisor of Assessors to be Elected by the County Board.

At the next meeting of the county board of supervisors to be held in November, a new officer will be elected in accordance with a law passed at the last session of the state legislature. The office is that known as county supervisor of assessment.

Duties of Supervisor.
 The duties and the powers of the supervisor of assessment are such that he has complete supervision and direction of the work of the assessors of the cities, villages and towns in the county. He is also required to call a meeting of all such assessors on or before the last Tuesday in April for conference and instruction, relative to the duties of such officers in the valuation and assessment of all kinds and classes of property. The supervisor is also required to visit each city, town and village once or more each year and examine all the books, papers and records pertaining to the assessments so as to secure full and accurate knowledge of property in the several assessment districts under his supervision. Another duty which devolves upon the supervisor of assessment is to examine the work of each assessor during the time of the work and shall have the power to personally assess different classes and kinds of property previously assessed by the assessors so that he may ascertain whether such assessor is assessing property at its full valuation or if he is omitting from the roll property subject to taxation. The supervisor shall also have all the rights of the regular assessor for examination of persons and property and for the discovery of property subject to taxation. It is also the duty of the supervisor, if he finds any such omissions, to report them to the assessors of that district and if it be not rectified, he shall report the same to the county board in writing for its action. The law also provides that the supervisor shall make a report in writing to the county board before its annual meeting giving in detail the work of each of the assessors in the county, and if any of the failure of such assessors or property owners to comply with the law. This report shall also show the true value of all property in the county and all other information and statistics as may be of assistance to the board in its equalization of assessment among the various cities, villages and towns in the county. The law also gives the board of supervisors the authority, if it deems wise, to direct the supervisor to make a re-assessment of all property in the district or county. The supervisors of assessment shall be under the supervision and direction of the state tax commission and all the officers of that class in the state will hold a meeting in the month of February of each year for a conference upon the subject of taxation, the administration of the laws and the instruction of such officers in their duties. The actual expense of the supervisor at such meeting shall be paid by county. The supervisor shall hold his office for a term of three years from the first Monday in January following the election.

Pay of Supervisor.
 The rate of compensation fixed by the law is that the county board may fix the rate of compensation, but it shall not be more than four dollars a day for every day actually employed, which amount shall include all his expenses. The county board may authorize the supervisor to appoint one or more deputies whose compensation and term of office shall be fixed by the county board but which shall not exceed that of the supervisor. Another law passed at the same session provides that any assessor who shall receive any reward or other gift which may be construed as a bribe shall be subject to a fine of not more than $600 or by imprisonment for a period of time not to exceed five years. It also provides that any person offering such bribe shall be punished, the penalty being the same. The law provides that any assessor who shall intentionally fix the value of any property assessed by him at less or more than the true value thereof prescribed by law for the valuation of the same, or shall intentionally omit from assessment any property liable to taxation in his assessment district, or shall otherwise intentionally violate or fail to perform any duty imposed upon him by law relating to the assessment of property for taxation, shall forfeit to the state not less than fifty dollars nor more than two hundred and fifty dollars.

NEW TRIAL IS GRANTED.

Case of Fond du Lac Man Convicted of Murder.

HOPE FOR LONEGAN.

First Time Court Has Reversed a Murder Case Wholly on Issue of Fact.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—James Logegan, who is serving a life sentence in state's prison under conviction of killing Policeman Prinslow at Fond du Lac November 18, 1898, was granted a new trial by the Supreme court today, and the warden of the state prison is directed to turn him over to the custody of the sheriff of Fond du Lac county.

The new trial is granted on the ground that there was not sufficient evidence to prove Logegan's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt; and it is the first time the court has reversed a murder case on that ground, it being unusual for the court to go into the facts in a case which has been reversed by the Supreme court's decision being usually only on the points of law.

In this case the Supreme court, after investigation of the testimony, bases its reversal on two grounds: First, that the identification of Logegan as the murderer and unsatisfactory that it did not prove beyond a reasonable doubt; and second, that according to the evidence, it was almost a physical impossibility to have committed the crime at the hour alleged—6:35 to 6:45 in the evening—and to have been discovered on a freight train, two or three miles south of the scene, at 6:45 the same evening.

The circumstances leading to the murder of Policeman Prinslow began with an attack by three robbers on Logegan at Fond du Lac, Wis., who had $1400 on his person. The robbers fired one shot at him, then ran across the river to the depot platform. South of the depot encountered Policeman Prinslow. He did not attempt to arrest them, but as they ran past they took three shots at him, all of which took effect, causing the officer's death the following afternoon. The robbers then ran south on the St. Paul railroad tracks.

Several persons were arrested at Jefferson next day and were held on preliminary examination, but were released through the efforts of the British consul. Logegan was arrested at Darlington in January, 1899, and was tried with another tramp, called "Prof. Shorty." "Shorty" was acquitted, but Logegan was found guilty. The only identification of Logegan was by a witness named Rocco, who said the defendant was about the same size and looked quite a little like one of the robbers.

Logegan's family is well-to-do and resides at Kenosha. He did not let any of his relatives or friends know that he was in trouble and asked no assistance. It was not until after he had been in prison some time that his family located him. Immediately steps were taken to have a new trial granted. Money was raised and the matter was taken to the Supreme court.

FRIGHTENED INTO A DEAD FAINT.

Hazing at Platteville Normal School Results Seriously—Fifteen Set Onto One Boy.

Platteville, Wis., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—The first spirit of hazing pervaded the normal school Saturday, as the result of demonstrations during a football game between Platteville and Lancaster teams, in which the latter was victorious. Rollo Moses, a normal student, and a resident of Lancaster, voiced his vocal enthusiasm in favor of his home team, much to the disgust of his fellow students. Late in the evening fifteen students found the young man and proceeded to take him for a dip in the city fountain, but he was so badly shocked that he went into a dead faint. The students laid him down in the park without carrying out their intentions. Later he was found by other students, still unconscious, and was revived. But he was entirely out of his right mind and frantic to escape his supposed tormentors. A physician was called and took the boy to his home. Saturday night and Sunday he was in a precarious nervous condition, but is slowly recovering from the shock.

He revealed the whereabouts of the box only two days before his death. It contains over $10,000.

SEARCH IN VAIN FOR MISSING GIRL.

It is Feared that Ladysmith Child was Carried Away by a Bear.

Ladysmith, Wis., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—The little Hohmen girl, who became lost in the woods near here Saturday afternoon, is still missing and it is now believed that she must be dead, as the last two nights which have passed have been quite cold. One hundred and fifty men are searching the woods thoroughly in the vicinity of the girl's home, but where the child was found was a red foxglove caught on a bush. Many think that the little one, who is only 6 years old, has been carried away by a bear. Bears are quite numerous in this vicinity, and the tracks of a large one were seen near where the child was found. The night before the child was lost bears robbed some beehives in the neighborhood. The latest theory is shared by Robert Corbett, one of the oldest settlers and a hunter of much experience. The little girl arrived here with her parents from Texas the day before she disappeared. Bloodhounds have been sent for to track the child.

MILWAUKEE ARRESTED.

H. H. Mixall is Taken to Fond du Lac to Answer Charge.

Fond du Lac, Wis., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Sheriff Bernard Sheridan returned Saturday from Milwaukee, where he arrested a man by the name of H. H. Mixall, upon the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses, preferred by E. J. Schmidt of this city by his attorney, George E. Ballhorn, assistant city attorney of Milwaukee. Mixall is charged with passing a worthless draft for $25 on the plaintiff on August 6. The defendant drew the draft on Julius Andrae, a prominent business man of Milwaukee, stating that he was in the employ of that company and that that amount of money was due as salary. Mr. Schmidt cashed the draft, but upon presenting it, the company refused to honor it, stating that no money was due Mixall. Attorney Ballhorn states that the defendant has been employed by the Andrae company for the past nine years and that his previous record has been excellent. The case was brought up before Justice Blewett Saturday and by mutual consent adjourned until Tuesday morning, October 22. The defendant being placed under bonds of $200 for his appearance.

ORDERS RAILS PULLED UP.

Track of Bayfield Road to be Sold as Personal Property.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 14.—In the federal court Judge Romanzo Bunn ordered the receivers of the Washburn, Bayfield & Iron River railway company to have the rails of the road, sixty miles in length, pulled up and sold as personal property. The court also ordered the receivers to sell all of the rolling stock of the company, except 172 cars made by the American Car and Foundry company of St. Louis, which asked for the return of its cars. The receivers had sold ninety-eight cars supplied the former by this company and in payment for these were ordered to turn over to the latter company $31,800. The proceeds of the sale of the rails and rolling stock are to be turned over to the creditors, in accordance with several orders of the court issued some time ago. The road has been in receivers' hands for the past three years. The company of Bayfield is understood to be dissatisfied with the order of the court and may take an appeal.

Theodore and Henry Kersten Issue a Letter to Creditors.

CALL A MASS MEETING.

Depositors in the German Exchange Bank of Chilton Receive Proposition.

Chilton, Wis., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—In a circular letter, addressed to the creditors of the German Exchange bank, Theodore and Henry Kersten, the bankrupts, give notice of a mass meeting to be held at the Turner hall here October 23, 1901, at which they propose to make the following offer of settlement: Thirty per cent. cash, 5 per cent. with 3 per cent. interest, on or before the expiration of one year from the date of the legal confirmation; 10 per cent. with 3 per cent. interest, on or before the date of confirmation; 5 per cent. with 3 per cent. interest, on or before the expiration of three years from the date of confirmation; 5 per cent. with 3 per cent. interest, on or before the expiration of five years from the date of confirmation. When seen today Theodore Kersten said: "We have called upon our creditors for $40,000, which we are unable to make good our promise to the creditors and we want every one of them present. If our proposition is accepted we will get it confirmed at the earliest possible moment under the law, which requires that thirty days notice be given to have it confirmed. We feel confident that if the majority of our creditors will accept our proposition we will be able to carry it out, in addition to taking off the hands of the creditors all costs and expenses which will be incurred if the trustee in bankruptcy reduces our assets to cash, and we also feel confident that this is a much larger percentage than can be procured in any other way. Under the circumstances we feel that the offer we propose to make is a liberal one."

MAY LOSE PROPERTY.

Racine, Wis., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—The heirs of Charles S. Wright, who was one of the pioneers of Racine, and who bequeathed several acres of land to Racine college, are making a search of the records to see whether certain parcels of land, included in the bequest, have not been sold to the North-Western road and the Milwaukee, Racine & Kenosha Electric railway. The conditions of the bequest, it is stated, were that the land in question should not be used for other than college purposes, and in the event of the violation of these conditions the property was to revert to Mr. Wright or his heirs or assigns. The heirs claim to have information regarding the property, and would warrant the expenditure of time and money necessary to make a thorough search of the records.

BOB GOES GUNNING.

Madison, Wis., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Gov. La Follette is improving rapidly at the Fox farm, where he has gone to recuperate. Private Secretary Murphy, who visited him there yesterday, says the governor is gaining strength daily. He will remain there all of this week, and, if he continues to gain as rapidly as he has thus far, it may not be necessary for him to go to French Lick. The governor usually walks around the farm every day, usually carrying his gun, and has brought down several squirrels.

The state pays $150 a week toward the support of every patient belonging to any county and $3 a week for patients belonging to the state. The rest of the expense is borne by the counties from which the patients come. The following shows the amount received by each county operating a county asylum and the amount paid by the counties and amount paid by the state:

GOODWIN IS CONVICTED.

Found Guilty of Attempting to Murder His Wife.

Juneau, Wis., Oct. 14.—[Special.]—Thomas Goodwin of Lost Lake was convicted of trying to murder his wife by throwing her into a well. A new trial has been asked for.

WEDS FIRST HUSBAND.

Goes Back to Man from Whom She Has Been Divorced Twice.

Waukesha, Wis., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Judge Dick of the circuit court has granted the petition of Mrs. Grace Snell Coffin Walker to wed again and as soon as she wishes.

Mrs. Walker was recently divorced from J. C. Walker, manager of the Fountain Spring house, and under the divorce law in this state it is necessary to have permission of the court before either party can wed within a year after the decree is granted.

Mrs. Walker is to be married to Frank N. Coffin of Chicago, from whom she has been divorced twice.

MARRIED FOR DYING CHILD'S SAKE.

Mrs. Walker is a daughter of Chicago's murdered millionaire, Amos J. Swell. Of late years she has been putting in odd moments as a writer of fiction. The alleged failure to appreciate her writings is one of the causes that led to an estrangement with Mr. Walker. It is said that on one occasion he consigned to the flames a large quantity of a daughter's manuscript, not heeding his wife's appeals to save at least a portion of her writings.

Prior to her marriage to Mr. Walker, Mrs. Coffin was the wife of Frank Nixon Coffin, to whom she was wedded in 1894. After ten years of wedded life they were divorced in Boston. But three years ago, when their 12-year-old boy was given up to die by the physicians, the father was summoned, the boy wishing to see him. They were remarried over the sick bed, but three months later, when the boy died, they again separated. Evidently the marriage had been made to give peace to the last days of the boy, for a divorce followed after the separation.

When the news of the trouble between Mrs. Walker and her husband became public, Mr. Coffin called on his former wife and offered her assistance in his power.

INTERESTED IN WALKER'S VOICE.

When Mr. Coffin and his wife were living at the Virginia hotel, Walker was chief clerk there. He had a fine voice, and the Coffins sent him abroad for a year to cultivate it. When he returned the divorce had just been granted to Mrs. Coffin, and Walker and she were married. On the day of their marriage, it is said, she gave him $50,000. They went to Europe for their honeymoon, and when they returned, according to Mrs. Walker, the money had been spent.

Much of Mrs. Walker's money and many of her jewels are gone, but she says that under the terms of her mother's will her financial future is secure. She spends her autumn and winter in her farm, Greenacres, near Antioch, Wis., and seems happy despite her troublesome times in the matrimonial line.

FIND MISSING CHILD.

Little Frances Stovaneck of Ladysmith Nearly Died of Exhaustion in the Woods.

Ladysmith, Wis., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Little Frances Stovaneck has been found and is alive. Three shots from a Winchester at 11:35 o'clock this forenoon told that the child had been found.

She was found a mile and one-half from here by W. E. Clark and Perry Bell of Ladysmith, who had not given up hope of finding her alive. She was in a sitting position in an old logging road, where it passed through a marsh, and was in winter. She was holding a bunch of moss to her mouth, but was nearly unconscious, when aroused by the men wrapping their coats about her. She fought them like a wildcat, but soon became assured of their good intentions and was brought home. Her shoes were gone, her clothing wet and her hands and face scratched by briars. Dr. Koss says that she will recover. There is great rejoicing in the village.

The search for little Frances Stovaneck, the girl who was reported to have been killed by a bear, was resumed today. A large number of men, most of whom were armed with rifles, started out this morning.

The sensational phase of the affair was the report of Mrs. C. W. Ensin of River Falls, a clairvoyant, who is visiting her daughter here, the wife of County Clerk Monroe. Mrs. Ensin went into a trance yesterday and described the girl's home perfectly and the clothes she wore, though she had never seen her. She also described the girl's whereabouts as being under a log, a certain distance from a large tree, with peculiar rough bark. She said that the girl was lying flat, with her head resting on her right arm, but she could not say whether or not the girl was dead.

DIDN'T DIE OF ANTHRAX.

Butcher Sues Neillsville Health Officer for $6000 Damages for Enforcing Unnecessary Quarantine.

Neillsville, Wis., Oct. 15.—[Special.]—Suit has been begun in the circuit court by Jesse Lowe, proprietor of one of the meat markets of this city, against Dr. T. P. Connor, city health officer, for the sum of $6000 damages, which Lowe claims to have sustained by reason of Dr. Connor having placed in quarantine his slaughter house and farm quarantined. The trouble grew out of the death of a large 3-year-old steer in Lowe's pasture from what was supposed at the time to be anthrax. Upon investigation it was found that the steer had died of the contents of a pail of Paris green, which was in a potato field adjacent to the pasture. Lowe now claims not only the loss of his meat and hides, which were burned, but also the loss to his business by reason of the failing off in his trade.

ON A CHARGE OF MURDER.

Prisoner in Waupun May Have to Stand Trial Upon Release.

FOR KILLING OFFICER.

There is Strong Evidence Against John Hughes—Sent Up from Portage.

La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—It begins to look as though John Hughes, doing time at Waupun for burglary in Columbia county, during the summer of 1900, will have to face the charge of being one of the three men who shot and killed Policeman Perry Gates during the same summer.

These men returned and robbed a man at La Crosse and Gates and Officer Schubert were detailed to watch for their coming over to the Wisconsin side. On their way to the river the officers met the men and Gates was shot.

The only man who can identify the three outlaws is the telegraph operator at La Crosse, and he went to Portage at the time of the trial of Hughes. When he came back the officers said that he had failed to identify Hughes as one of the men, but it now leaks out that he did and that the officers denied it to put Hughes off his guard. Whether he will be brought back here or not is a question depending upon the amount of evidence that can be added.

Hughes was first suspected of complicity in the Gates case by a Milwaukee officer, who communicated with the La Crosse police immediately. He is also thought to be one of three men who threw two trunks off a train on the Chicago & North-Western below Elroy, after robbing them. Two were arrested, Hughes being one, but the other broke away at a Madison restaurant, shielding himself from the officers' revolvers by carrying one of the waiter girls between himself and the deputy.

RUINED HIS RESORT.

The Draining of Big Muskego Lake Gets Into Court Again.

Waukesha, Wis., Oct. 12.—[Special.]—August Priewe has filed an injunctive order with the circuit clerk commanding that the ditches which have been used to drain the Big Muskego lake be filled up, and that the defendants, the Fitzsimmons & Connell company of Milwaukee, be permanently enjoined from again opening them or making similar ones for such a purpose. Priewe was the plaintiff of the celebrated case of Priewe vs. the Wisconsin State Land and Improvement company, which was appealed to the Supreme court from the order of the circuit judge of Milwaukee county in 1896. At that time the Supreme court sustained the injunction, thus reversing the decision of the Milwaukee court. The present case is almost exactly the same kind, but comes up in the December term of the circuit court in this county instead of Milwaukee county.

It seems that Priewe is the owner of certain lands on the shore of Muskego lake and is engaged in the business of farming and maintaining a clubhouse and summer resort, with boats and fishing and hunting tackle for use and rent, upon the waters of the lake. The level of the lake was lowered some five feet by means of these ditches, the purpose of using reclaimed lands for agricultural purposes, and this left Priewe's clubhouse about a third of a mile from the water, with the intervening land consisting of muck and soft sand, which is full of springs, so that it is unsafe to walk over it, and the value of the place as a resort, consequently, is greatly lessened, if not entirely destroyed. In addition to the restoring of the former level of the lake the plaintiff asks $1000 damages.

MONUMENTS TO PRESIDENTS.

Heads of the Nation Honored After Death—Imposing Memorials for Washington, Lincoln, Grant, Garfield and Others.

HERE is no doubt that a splendid monument will be erected in honor of the late President McKinley, as a shrine at which American love and loyalty will pay devotion during coming generations. Friends of the martyred President have already begun the collection of funds for a memorial to be raised over his remains at Canton and hope to collect $500,000. It is safe to assume that the monument will be a noble structure—a fit companion for the memorials to Washington, Lincoln, Grant and Garfield.

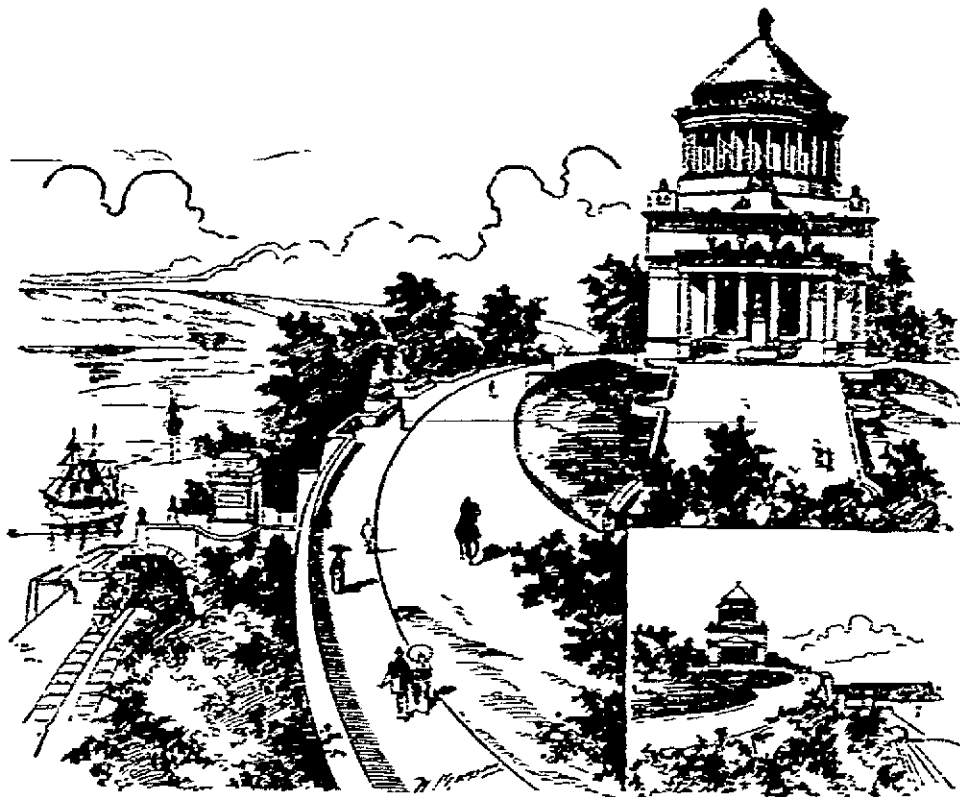

These are the Presidents best beloved of the people, and their memories are enshrined in the most imposing of shafts and mausoleums. Jackson was a rugged and martial character, but he is chiefly represented by equestrian statues. The graves of many of the Presidents are marked only by simple marble stones or modest shafts. John Adams and his son, John Quincy Adams, rest in vaults under the portico of First Church at Quincy, Mass., and their burial places are indicated by tablets in the church. Tyler is a fit subject for a philosopher's homily, for tons for the iron framework. The foundation weighs 26,912 tons, making a total of about $1,000 tons. The top of the monument can be reached by elevator or stairs. This mighty shaft has often been struck by lightning, and it sways several inches out of plumb during severe storms.

each representing a State, the name of which is carved on the shield. At the south side of the obelisk is a square pedestal seven feet high, supporting the statue of Lincoln, the pedestal being ornamented with the coat of arms of the United States.

Garfield Memorial.

The Garfield memorial is a massive structure of native Ohio sandstone. It stands on an eminence in Lake View Cemetery in the suburbs of the city of Cleveland. Its base is a square structure which is surmounted by a round tower with a conical top. The tower is 50 feet in diameter and its top is 180 feet from the ground. The porch at its base is decorated by a frieze divided into five sections, the figures in which are life-size. The central section represents

The nation's tribute, erected on Riverside drive, New York, to the Silent Man of Galena.

The Lincoln monument at Springfield, Ill., was dedicated in 1874. The memorial, which cost $250,000, is constructed of brick and Quincy granite, the latter only showing on the outer surfaces. There is a base about 72 feet square and 16 feet high. At the north side of the base is a semi-circular projection, which contains the vestibule of the catacomb and gives access to view the crypts containing the remains of Lincoln and his wife and children. A projection on the south side contains a memorial hall in elliptical form. The length of the base from north to south, including the two projections, is about 120 feet, and in the angles formed by the projections are flights of stairs guarded by granite balustrades and rising to the terrace above the catacomb. Upon this terrace is surmounted another structure composed of the base of the shaft and four pedestals at the corners, the pedestals reaching a height of 12 feet above the terrace. From Inside this square structure is a memorial hall. It is circular in form and is surrounded by a vaulted corridor or vestibule. A place was provided in the center of this shrine for a marble statue of the dead President beneath a dome supported ported by pillars of dark red polished granite and inlaid with Venetian glass mosaic or a gold ground. The memorial hall is richly decorated with stained glass, mosaic and colored marbles. A professional frieze of mourning figures bringing tributes of love and respect, executed in marble mosaic, encircles the hall just above the arches.

The Grant Monument.

New York's finest memorial is President Grant's tomb, a testimonial of love and gratitude from the whole people. It has a beautiful site on Riverside drive, one of the highest points on Manhattan Island. It faces the everlasting Palisades, and overlooks the Hudson River for many miles. The monument is of white granite. Its main feature is the memorial hall, which is surmounted by a cylindrical structure terminating with a colossal statue in bronze. On the south side is a Doric portico, rising about two-thirds the height of the main structure, with a flat entablature intended for statuary. On the other three sides are columns against a blank wall. At the angles of the base are square pedestals for sculpture.

JUDGE LEFT CASE TO LAWYER.

and the Attorney Decided Against His Own Client.

The importance of the justice of the peace is more felt the farther in from the stir of towns. In cities this office, though it is important and dignified, does not receive the recognition that it should, but out in the country the justice is a big man, his decisions are generally final and his opinion is eagerly sought. Oren, however, his knowledge of the law is a little deficient.

In a little town in middle Georgia there lived a lawyer, says the Atlanta Constitution, who has since made his name famous through the South for eloquence, knowledge of the law and practical sense. At this time he had about reached the stage where he could afford to stop practicing in justice courts, and to clinch this resolution he had determined to accept no more practice for any fee under $20.

One day a lady came into his office and informed him that she had a case in a court about ten miles out in the country, and that she wanted him to take it for her. The subject of contention was a cow. He told her of his fee, thinking to get rid of her in this manner. From somewhere in her dress she pulled out some bills, counted over $20 and told him that he had to go. Still wishing to find a hole through which to escape he inquired as to the value of the cow. She answered $15. He then asked about the case, and when she had finished her story he informed her that she had the wrong side of it and that whether he went out or not she would lose it. Nothing would change her determination, however; she wanted to law it out and he had to go.

On the day appointed the lawyer drove out to court, having shut up his office for the day, and on his arrival there found everything in readiness for the trial. The witnesses were examined and the counsel for the other side made his plea. The evidence was against him, but he determined to do the best for the old lady and to rattle the other lawyer if he could. He commenced his speech, mixed up all the law he had ever heard of, ridiculed the other lawyer, rattled the witnesses, shifted about their testimony to please himself and utterly confused the justice, who looked on in amazement, unable to decide the case. When the speech was over the judge said:

"Bill, I will leave the case with you. If you really believe that your client should have the cow, upon your honor as a gentleman, I will give it to her."

The lawyer was surprised, and by no means desiring to lose the cow for his client, said:

"Judge, you are the judge in this case. I am not. I am merely expressing the opinion of my client."

The judge insisted on an answer; so he was obliged to reply that he did not think his client had any right to the animal and the case was decided.

Strange to say, the client was not angry, but agreed that under the circumstances he had done all that he could. It was merely her desire to law it out that had brought on the difficulty.

WONDERFUL LEAP BY A HORSE.

Frightened Mare Jumps Clear Over a Full-Sized Freight Car.

While working near Green River, Wyo., a Union Pacific repair gang had its cars set on a spur, and all around the spot on both sides of the track was fine pasture for the work horses. One morning while the men were rounding up the horses the bunch took fright at something just as they were started toward the camp. In a wild rush they swooped down on the corral, and one mare, which seemed to have been thoroughly frenzied, dashed directly toward the train. Some of the men, seeing the fright of the animal, tried to turn her, but she went on, heedless of the obstruction.

"I was standing in front of the boarding car," said Charles Anderson, "and felt sure she would butt out her brains against the car. Just as she reached the edge of the shallow cut at which the cars stood she stopped an instant, firmly planted her feet in the ground, and gave one mighty leap. The car was cleared as cleanly and perfectly as though the animal had been a trained English hurdle horse instead of a common hobo on a grade team."

"The car she leaped over was a standard-gauge flat, loaded with steel rails. The bank from which she started was not more than six inches above the ties, and the other side was lower. Apparently the animal was not injured by her wild leap. The foreman of the gang saw her make the leap and bought her from the man who owned her, and says he proposes to keep her for a family pet because of her feat. She is apparently of Canadian copper-bottom stock and weighs about 1,050 pounds."

A Club.

Yellowly—What! Are you going home already?

Brownly—Yes; I must go. Wife is waiting up for me.

Yellowly—My wife belongs to a woman's club, and when she goes out to it in an afternoon, I never say a word if she stays away six hours, so she never says anything to me if I am out a little later than usual. Don't your wife belong to a club?

Brownly—No, but there's a club that belongs to her, and it is the knowledge of that fact that is hurrying me home.

—Boston Courier.

BECOMING A REPORTER.

A Bit of Experience in the Life of an Immigrant to America.

Things enough happened to take down my self-esteem a good many pangs. It was about this time I made up my mind to go into the newspaper business. It seemed to me that a reporter's was the highest and noblest of all callings. No one could sift wrong from right as he, and punish the wrong. In that I was right. I have not changed my opinion on that point one whit, and I would rather die a good reporter than a millionaire. The power of fact is the mightiest lever of this or of any day. The reporter has his hand upon it, and it is his grievous fault if he does not use it well. I thought I would make a good reporter. My father had edited our local newspaper, and such little help as I had been to him had given me a taste for the business. Being of that mind, I went to the Courier office one morning and asked for the editor. He was not in. Apparently nobody was. I wandered through room after room, all empty, until at last I came to one in which sat a man with a pasty face and a pair of long shears. This must be the editor. He had the implements of his trade. I told him my errand while he clipped away.

"What is it you want?" he asked, when I had ceased speaking and waited for an answer.

"Work," I said.

"Work!" said he, waving he haughtily away with the shears. "We don't work here. This is a newspaper office."

I went, abashed. I tried the Express next. This time I had the editor pointing out to me. He was just coming through the business office. At the door I stopped him and preferred my request. He looked me over, a lad fresh from the shipyard, with horny hands and a rough coat, and asked:

"What are you?"

"A carpenter," I said.

The man turned upon his heel, with a loud, rasping laugh, and shut the door in my face. For a moment I stood there stunned. His ascending steps on the stairs brought back my senses. I ran to the door and flung it open. "You laugh!" I shouted, shaking my fist at him, standing half way up the stairs. "You laugh now, but wait!"

And then I got the grip of my temper and slammed the door in my turn. All the same, in that hour it was settled that I was to be a reporter. I knew it as I went out in the street.—Jacob Riis in The Outlook.

GONE TO BE A CELESTIAL BRIDE.

Death of Mrs. Brigham Young, "Eternity" Wife of Joseph Smith.

Mrs. Zina D. Young, the most noted of the wives of Brigham Young, the famous Mormon apostle, died recently at Salt Lake City, Utah. She was born in Watertown, N. Y., in 1821, and at 15 became a convert to the doctrines of Mormonism, going directly to the settlement of Kirksland, Ohio. Here her devotion to her

MRS. ZINA D. YOUNG religion was so great that she was entrusted with a part of the mysteries of the temple. While there she told of a vision in which she had seen an angel and been invested with the "gift of tongues and interpretation," the power to speak in language used only by the chosen ones of God, and to understand this strange speech.

She married one of Smith's converts, and two children were born to them. She deserted them at Nauvoo, Ill., when Joseph Smith had a "revelation" that she had been set aside for him as wife for "time and eternity." She was sealed to the prophet as a plural wife, and was his favorite until he was killed by a mob in Illinois.

Brigham Young, who then had several wives, had a "revelation" that she should be sealed to him for "time." She followed Brigham Young in the eventful journey from Illinois to the Salt Lake valley in the late '40's. She trudged behind wagons, slept in tents, cooked for the travelers and bore many hardships, entering the "New Zion" with the first settlers. After the death of Brigham Young she lived in Salt Lake City. She was always an earnest advocate of polygamy.

Only four of the widows of Brigham Young now survive. They live in Salt Lake City.

Curiosity in Books.

The most remarkable book in the world so far as its appearance is concerned is neither written nor printed. It is in the imperial library of Paris and the letters are cut out of tissue paper with a pair of scissors. A sheet of blue tissue, in which the letters are cut, is placed between two pages of white, and so the matter is read.

Old Peruvian Roads.

The Incas of Peru built very fine roads, one system of which traversed the plateau, the other followed the seacoast north and south. The seacoast road is said to have been from 1,500 to 2,000 miles in length and twenty feet in breadth. Many portions of this magnificent system of roads are still fit for use.

Aids to German Trade.

Germany has now expert commercial attaches at New York, Buenos Ayres, Constantinople and St. Petersburg. The services of these gentlemen, who are attached to the consulates general and not to the embassies, have proved very valuable to German trade interests.

Manager—It's a wonder Roadley didn't give you an engagement in his company. He thinks you're a good actor. Actor—Does he? Manager—Yes; he says you can ask for a big salary as if you expected to get it.

"Brains are what count in this day," said the enthusiast. "Yes," answered the pessimist; "but there isn't much use of their counting if you can't put dollar marks in front of the figures employed in the process."—Washington Star.

Disadvantages: "Don't you love the great, beautiful ocean?" said the sentimental girl. "Yes," answered the unsentimental man; "but I'd like it better if it were not so full of watermelon rinds, lemon peels, lunch boxes and things."—Washington Star.

Only an Item: Stranger (looking at State building at great exposition)—And it costs seventy-five thousand dollars to put up this insignificant structure! You astonish me. Attendant—Oh, dear, no! That was merely the sum the State paid for it.—Chicago Tribune.

Patience—Is your preacher sensational? Patrice—I should say so! Why, he preached a sermon last Sunday, and he took for his subject "It's Hard to Keep a Good Man Down." Patience—Well? Patrice—Oh, it was all about Jonah and the whale.—Yonkers Statesman.

"What a wonderful painter Rubens was," remarked Mr. Jones at the art gallery. "Yes," assented Mrs. Jones; "it is said of him that he could change a laughing face into a sad one by a single stroke." "Why," spoke up little Johnnie, in disgust, "my schoolmaster can do that!"—Exchange.

Quick Work: "You," said the angry customer to the clerk, "said that this cloth was fast color, and it faded out within two weeks after it was made up." "Well, madam," replied the clerk, "I don't think you ought to have expected it to fade any faster than that."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

"Ha! ha!" exclaimed the Turk, with a sinister gleam of his eyes: "The Sultan may insult me to-day, but retribution is in my own hands." "Who are you that dare talk of vengeance on the Sultan?" "One who knows whereof he speaks," was the haughty answer; "I am his dentist."—Washington Star.

One day a thief was brought up before the sheriff for stealing a bag of coal. When asked what he had done it for he answered: "Oh! just for a joke." He was asked how far he carried it. "Two miles," he replied. "That was carrying the joke too far," replied the sheriff. "Sixty days!"—Tit-Bits.

An Opportunity. "Supposing I give you your supper," said the tired-looking woman; "what will you do to earn it?" "Madam," said Mcandering Mike, "I'll give you de opportunity of seeing a man go 'troot a whole meal without findin' fault wit' a single ring." The woman thought a minute, and then told him to come in and she'd set the table.—Washington Star.

"I suppose you went to some expense in fitting up your house so as to make your summer boarders comfortable?" "Yes, indeed," answered Farmer Cornstassel. "I had three thermometers built especial for the place. They was each guaranteed not to register no higher than 70 degrees. It cost a little suthin', but it paid in the long run."—Chicago Post.

Babcock on Steel.

Just at the present time Representative Babcock is receiving more newspaper notoriety in Wisconsin than any other man. One day some republican newspaper comes out with a lengthy interview from that gentleman in which he tells just where his position is on the tariff matter, and the next day some other republican sheet comes out with a lengthy editorial explaining what Mr. Babcock meant and what he did not mean in his interview of the day before. It would seem to an intelligent man that these explanations are entirely unnecessary. When Mr. Babcock is interviewed he explains his stand without hesitation and in language so plain that any man can understand it. He maintains that the tariff on steel billets is so high that it prevents the foreign manufacturer from competing with domestic manufacturers in any way. As a consequence the American manufacturer is able to control the home market and sell his product at a price that robs those who have to buy from him. This is naturally a decidedly wrong condition of affairs, and Mr. Babcock wants to right matters by reducing the tariff on this particular product. The Chicago Record-Herald, a republican paper says: "A tariff such as that on steel is simply indefensible. It falls clearly within the inhibition implied in a description by the congressman which may be adopted as a very good guide for the first steps in tariff reform. 'When any article,' he says, 'can be manufactured in the United States cheaper than anywhere else and is an article of export, the duty produces no revenue and affords no protection, but simply enables those who secure control to make such prices as they see fit in the domestic market up to a point where it can be imported.' People who believe in a tariff for revenue with incidental protection; and those who believe in a tariff for protection with incidental revenue have a common interest in opposing a tariff of this sort, which resolves itself simply into a tariff for squeezing this people."

The Record-Herald is honest enough to admit that the existing tariff allows the manufacturer to rob the people and it would seem that no explanation of Mr. Babcock's action would be necessary from the republican press. Mr. Babcock is trying to accomplish the same thing that the democratic party has tried to do for years. Let us hope that he will not stop at the steel trust.

He Defends Athletics.

"Athletics tend to keep the boys out of vice. I would rather have a son brought home dead from a football field than brought home drunk from a saloon. Athletics use up the superfluous energies of the students and at night they feel more like going to bed than running about town with the rougher element. The danger from broken bones is much less than that which comes from spending the energies in smoking, drinking and other vice."

Such was the statement of C. C. Parlin, principal of the Wausau High school, who spoke on a subject of especial interest to young men, at the teachers' convention at Oshkosh Friday afternoon. His topic was "The Working of the Wisconsin System of Control in High School Athletic Contests." The basis of the system as stated by Mr. Parlin is that there is a board of control elected by the High school principals of the state. This board has charge of all school athletic contests where the schools are members of the board of control. No school can contest with a school not connected with the association without a special permit from the board. Those students who participate in the contests must be up in their studies, must take full work and must be under 21 years of age. Mr. Parlin endorsed the present system with the provision that one of the teachers should be always with the boys while they are training, or they will fool away their time instead of training properly. He said that an athletic contest stands for training.

Appreciates Her Recovery.

To whom it may concern: It gives me much pleasure to add my testimonial to the many others who have been cured by Drs. M. E. and B. V. Prentiss now at Dixon house. I was suffering from a severe throat trouble which had been pronounced consumption as I coughed and had several hemorrhages and most of the time could not speak above a whisper. After taking a course of their magnetic treatments I can say that I am completely cured. I wish to state also that I witnessed the miraculous cure of Mr. Meddangin, of this place, in a single treatment. I earnestly advise any who are in need of such professional services to give them a trial. Yours very truly, LILLIAN SMITH.

Married.

A home wedding around which considerable interest has centered, took place last evening at the home of Mrs. Mary Johnson, when her daughter, Ellen Margaret, was united in marriage to Mr. Royal J. Havenor. The house was decorated with smilax and cut flowers and represented a very pretty appearance. About forty relatives and friends were present to witness the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. J. R. Reynolds of this city. Promptly at eight o'clock, to the strains of the wedding march played by Miss Anna Larsen, the bridal couple descended the stair, accompanied by their attendants, Wayne Miller and Miss Jessie Harmon and took their places in the bow window where the ceremony was performed. The bride was becomingly attired in white silk and carried bride's roses and the bridesmaid wore white organdie and carried pink carnations. After congratulations were received, an elegant wedding supper was served. The bridegroom is a worthy young man and for the past three years has been in the drug store of C. H. Truesdell. The bride is a graduate of our high school, being one of the class of '98, and has been a popular clerk in Nielsen Bros.' dry goods store since that time. Both young people are deservedly popular and they have the best wishes of their many friends for a long and happy life. They left on the early morning train for a brief trip to Chicago and on their return will take up their residence with Mrs. Havenor's mother, Mrs. Mary Johnson on State street—Waupaca Post.

Mr. and Mrs. Havenor are expected here Saturday evening to spend a few days.

Lost a Cow.

During the past summer John B. Arpin had one of his cows down in the marsh country for the purpose of supplying the men on the dredge with milk. Some time ago the cow got away and although a vigorous search was made, nothing could be found of the bovine. Later another and more thorough search was made and the cow's hide was found in a butcher shop at Babcock, where some person had sold it. It was apparent that some person had found the animal and knowing it was a stranger in those parts had killed the cow and probably used the meat and sold the hide. As the cow was a nice fat animal, John was somewhat put out about the matter, and it is probable that the culprit will be brought to justice.

Across the River.

The Messrs. Knuteson, who had been doing the submarine work on the water pipes across the river, started in on their work again on Monday and put in the last length that connected the two shores on Friday. No difficulties were encountered on the west bank of the river anything like the east side, as it was possible to cut a channel for the pipe with the aid of a stream of water from the hydrant. This was much easier than blasting through solid granite, as was the case on the east side. All of the work on the mains has been moving forward at a rapid pace during the past week.

Working the Farmers.

From LaCrosse Chronicle: Three smooth young men have succeeded in working a number of rich farmers in this vicinity out of various sums by "selling" them the right to sell and act as agents for a wire fence machine. Bert Smith, a farmer near West Salem put up $14 for an agency and many others put up smaller amounts. It turns out that when the farmers signed the contract they were in reality signing a note for a large amount on the bank. Later the smooth trio disappeared with the money. Many farmers have a large stock of the fence machines, which by the way are almost worthless, and the men have escaped.

The New Northern Wisconsin

Not so many years ago Northern Wisconsin was only known as a vast lumber camp. In this region the choppers and sawyers of the day rapidly turned the tall pine into building material. Then came the development of the mining industry and as time sped on manufacturers and farmers turned their eyes to the New North. They saw many opportunities for getting rich with the aid of the fine soil, the varieties of trees, iron ore, clay, kolin and marl and now the busy hum of machinery in the shop and the work of the reaper on the farm plainly indicates prosperity. Although this country is rapidly settling, there are still plenty of opportunities, as land is cheap and can be purchased on easy terms. Transportation facilities are of the very best for

The Northwestern people now have a telegraph line in operation as far as this city. A. S. Ritchie of Marshfield who has held the position as operator at that point, has been transferred here and is now in charge of the instruments, which are located in a building about a block south of the Central depot.

County Supt. Otto Leu recently purchased the Chas. Fandrick farm in Altdorf. The farm consists of 160 acres. The price paid was $32,000 including stock, farming implements, etc. and is considered a splendid bargain by people who are acquainted with the place. Mr. Fandrick expects to move to Tomahawk in the near future.

—The Ladies of the Catholic society have decided to give a Coffee Klatch. Come one and all, both great and small and enjoy an evening's treat where coffee and kuchen will be hailed with delight. The rest of the bill of fare will be a surprise and we hope to meet you all at the Forester hall next Thursday night, October 24th. Music by Colcord's orchestra.

On Wednesday Geo. F. Krieger bought the bowling alley building from the west side fire company. Mr. Krieger will probably secure a lot on which to move the building and then fix it up for a store and repair shop and occupy the same with his stock of bicycles and sporting goods. The shop will be fitted out with a full outfit of machinery for doing repair work of all kinds.

N. Reiland has had placed in his meat market on the east side a four horsepower electric motor which runs his sausage cutting machine. Mr. Reiland has heretofore used a steam engine for this purpose and he speaks very highly in favor of the change. No doubt other motors for light work will be put in about the city as the handiness of electric power for light work becomes better known.

—A new remedy for biliousness is now on sale at Johnson & Hill Co.'s drug store. It is called Chamberlain's stomach and liver tablets. It gives quick relief and will prevent the attack if given as soon as the first indication of the disease appears. Price, 25 cents per box. Samples free. Johnson & Hill Co. has them.

Some of the youngsters on the west side have been amusing themselves by fastening "tic-tacs" on houses about town and thereby greatly annoying the inhabitants. Officer Kellogg says he has the names of the culprits but does not want to make any arrests provided they will discontinue the alleged sport at once. This is lots of fun for the boys, but it does not amuse the old folks to such an extent as it might.

Pot hunters have discovered a new way to carry on their work of killing game to sell. They get out licenses for their little children, each then being entitled to take a certain number, and thus the "old man" gets in a good stroke of business, going to market with his children and their licenses, and selling his partridges for $1 each, and no car fare to pay for the children. Quite smart, you bet.—Neillsville Times.

On Monday afternoon the stock of hardware of Gitchell & Lubeck was sold by the trustee, W. E. Wheelan, to N. Reiland and Nathan Church. The sale price covers 75% per cent of the inventory of the stock. The new firm will carry on a general hardware business as was done by their predecessors. Mr. Church was employed by the old firm and is thoroughly acquainted with the business. An advertisement for the company appears in another column of this issue.

While engaged in digging the ditch for the waterworks pipe on the east side, one of the workmen unearthed a Mexican silver dollar at a depth of several feet. The piece of money had undoubtedly lain there for many years, as it was corroded and black with age and bore the date of 1831. Old residents here can remember when there was considerable Mexican silver in circulation, it being accepted at a considerable discount. J. L. Whitney secured the piece of money as a keepsake.

Rev. W. A. Peterson, who has occupied the pulpit in this city during the past year has been assigned to this city again for the ensuing year. There are many people both in the church and outside of it who will be glad to hear of this, for Mr. Peterson has proven himself to be an earnest and energetic worker and a man who should be welcomed by any community. Mr. Peterson returned from the conference at Ripon on Saturday in order to officiate at the funeral of Mr. Lyons.

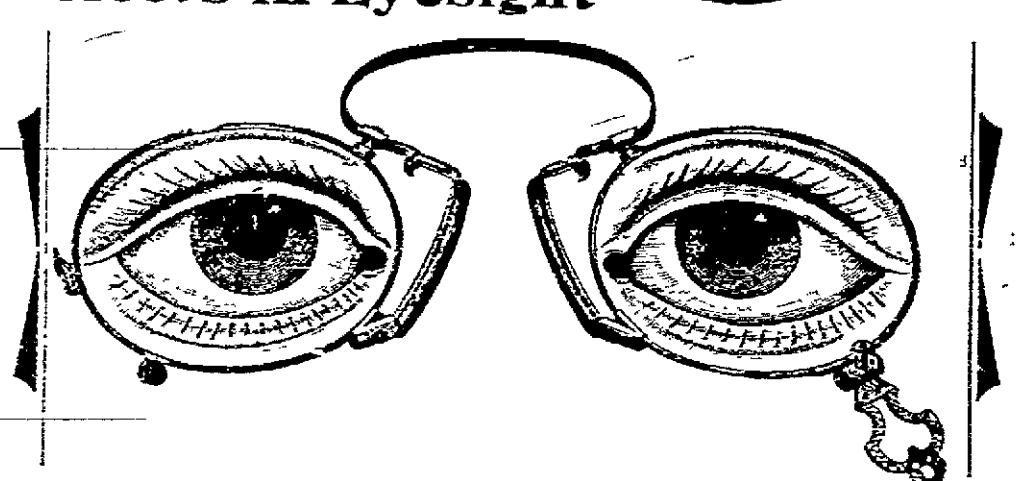

The editor of the Hometown (Iowa) Advocate claims that his town has three of the stingiest men on record. The first will not drink as much water as he wants unless it comes from a neighbor's well. The second forbids any of his family writing anything but a small hand, as it is a waste of ink to make large letters. The third stops the clock at night to save the wear and tear on machinery. All of them refused to take a newspaper on the ground that it is such a terrible strain on the spectacles to read.

Some time ago the Tribune mentioned the death of Miss Bertha Pelton, who was well known in this city, having taught school here. Miss Pelton was on her way home and stopped at a hotel at Dodge Center. That night the hotel burned and Miss Pelton was supposed to have perished in the flames, subsequently there were some strange developments in the case and the hotel keeper was arrested for having murdered Miss Pelton for her money and then set the hotel on fire. The grand jury has found an indictment against the man for murder in the first degree.

AN AUTUMN SONG.

Again the old heraldic pomp
Of Autumn on the hills;
A scarlet pageant in the swamp;
Low lyrics from the rills;
And rich attire in the air
That Orient morn distills.

Again the tapestry of haze
Of amethystine dye
Encircling the horizon ways;
And from the middle sky
The iterant, reverberant call
Of wild geese winging by.

Again the riots of wind
Attuned to one soft theme—
Here, every burden left behind,
Oh, love would it not seem
A near approach to paradise
To dream and dream and dream!

A NATURAL SEQUENCE

A LITTLE girl stood in front of a rose-covered cottage pensively trying to bore a hole through her flappy straw hat with a small forefinger. Opposite her stood a tow-haired boy, perhaps a year older.

"I'm goin' away to-morrow, Blossom," announced the boy mournfully.

"Are yer?" said the girl soberly.

"Yep. It's an awful long way—most 200 miles, pa says." Then, after a pause: "Don't see how I'm goin' to marry yer when I'm away down in New York."

"O, soldiers is sent everywhere," said the girl wisely, "and nurses, too. I'm goin' to be a nurse when I grow up."

"Well, I'm goin' to be a soldier, sure, cause pa said I might, and when I'm a major or a colonel I'm comin' back with a regiment to get yer and—"

"There's ma callin'. It's time to go, Eddie."

"Good-by, Blossom."

There was a timid kiss and two heavy little hearts wended their way homeward.

It was a terrible day. The hot Cuban sun beat mercilessly down upon the group of tan-suited "Americans" lying flat on their stomachs, creeping, creeping, ever nearer and nearer the thicket where the Spanish sharpshooters lay hidden.

"Easy boys," whispered the captain; "Jenkins' company will draw their fire in a minute."

With a sigh of relief the men lay flat. The long rank grass cut their faces and the yellow sand filled their eyes and added fresh agony to their already parched throats. Down at the end of the line a man was cursing because a sharp stone had bruised his leg.

But their rest was only for a moment. Far in the rear they heard a hoarse cheer. Then a volley of bullets flew high over them, and was answered by the crack, crack of the Spanish Mausers.

"Now, boys," whispered the captain again. Over their heads the firing was fast and furious, but the little group crept on, almost to the very fringe of the thicket.

"Now! at 'em, boys," roared the captain. The whole command rose to their feet. With a wild cheer, they rushed forward. With hoarse oaths they threw themselves on the sallow group of sharpshooters. There was the rapid firing of heavy revolvers, answering shrieks of wounded men, groans and prayers. Out into the open air ran the enemy, only to be shot down by Jenkins' men in front.

In five minutes it was all over, and the Americans were gathering together to count their numbers.

"That was quick work," grunted the lieutenant, as he wiped the powder stains from his face. "Where's Mason?"

"Where's Capt. Mason?" shouted the sergeant.

"Here he is," answered a hoarse voice, and a burly private appeared with his arm around the captain, almost dragging him along.

The officer's face was white, and he said, as he clenched his white teeth together: "I guess they've done for me, Tom, this time."

"Nonsense," said the lieutenant, roughly. "Up with him, boys; easy, easy," and as four of the privates lifted him to their shoulders they retraced their way back through the long grass to their own lines, and there, in the shade of the hospital tent, they tenderly laid down their burden and left him to the care of the surgeon.

All night long they worked over him—the doctor and a sweet-faced woman with a red cross on her arm. As the last bandage was fastened and the doctor rose to go his rounds he said: "He won't last till to-morrow." The nurse said nothing, but as the tent door flapped behind him she muttered rebelliously: "He will last till to-morrow, and a good many more to-morrows."

Early the next morning the wounded man opened his eyes, to find a woman bending over him. He looked up weakly and would have spoken, but she put her hand over his mouth, and said, quite calmly: "It's only Blossom. You're hurt, and I'm going to take care of you. I told you I was going to be a nurse."

He smiled faintly, and fell into a gentle sleep, with her hand clasped tightly in his.

Two days later as the fussy little doctor came his rounds he announced, with a considerable degree of self-satisfaction: "Mason is going to live. Miss Carvill. Didn't think I could pull him through, but I did after all."

The nurse smiled inscrutably, but said nothing.

They were sitting just inside the tent door waiting for orders to embark on the transport.

MRS. GROVER CLEVELAND AS SHE LOOKS TO-DAY.

The above picture is from the latest and one of the best photographs of Mrs. Grover Cleveland, who for two terms was mistress of the White House and recognized as the most beautiful woman in the national capital. This picture shows that Mrs. Cleveland still has remarkable beauty, although she has changed considerably in appearance since she was first lady of the land. She has grown stouter and her features are fuller than her former photographs represent. However, the change has in no way detracted from the beauty of the ex-President's wife. She retains the beauty which made her conspicuous during the years she was the leader of official life in Washington, and to-day she looks younger, and if anything more beautiful, than ever before.

His right arm was still in a sling, but his left hand vainly sought to rest on hers, which she promptly removed.

"What are you going to do when you are 'mustered out,' Blossom?" he asked.

"I'm Miss Carvill, now, people are well again," she observed, speaking to no one in particular.

"But I am not well yet," he objected.

"You are going to be. What's the matter? Aren't you glad?" she demanded, as his face fell.

"I don't know; that depends," he said, significantly.

As the girl made no answer, he went on reminiscently: "Do you remember the day I left for New York? You said we would be sure to meet again. I suppose we ought to get married. We've been engaged most fifteen years."

"Well, I like that," gasped the girl.

"So do I," said the man placidly; "there might have been some one else to marry if I had not promised you first."

The girl's eyes twinkled. "You said you were going to come for me with a regiment," she suggested.

His good arm had slipped around her now. "So I did," he said, meditatively.

"Well, I suppose I shall have to if you won't come any other way." Then, as he drew the sun-tanned face close down to his own, he said: "But don't you think it would be most embarrassing under the present circumstances?"

And Blossom thought it would.—Indianapolis Sun.

TOM REED TOOK A CARRIAGE.

Intended to Walk, but the Driver's Humor Caught Him.

A tall, portly, dignified citizen arrived in New York the other day, and having no luggage but a light traveling satchel, was utterly oblivious to the appeals of the hackmen as he emerged from the New York Central station.

"Fee—thruvoo! Fee—thruvoo!" Fifth avenue—go in! Fifth avenue—go in!

Mr. Dignity stalked right on without a word. Another knight of the whip charged down upon him.

"Say, Denis! Say, Denis? This way for the Say Denis?"

No response from the traveler and not a muscle moving in his face. Then there was a rush of half a dozen.

"Kerridge, sir, kerridge? Wanter kerridge?"

"Waldorf Astor! Take a kerridge for the Waldorf!"

"Holland House, sir!"

"Huffman House! Huffman!"

"Broadway Cutliff! Right on Broadway! 'Ere you are, kerridge, sir?"

The traveler loomed up like a ten-pin among vinegar cruets, and with face as placid as a pan of milk was calm and silently moving away from the crowd of hawks, who looked after him with something like amazement. When a sudden thought seemed to strike one of the knights of the whip, who ran after the portly gentleman, and, seizing his traveling bag, cried: "Deaf an' dumb asylum, sir? Goin' right up?"

This was too much. Dignity relaxed into a cherubic smile, and the witty hackman had the honor and profit of driving Thomas B. Reed, ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives, to his home.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

MILES OF VARYING LENGTH.

Seventeen Countries Have Special Measurements of Their Own.

English-speaking countries, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, have four different miles—the ordinary mile of 5,280 feet and the geographical or nautical mile of 6,085, making a difference of about one-seventh between the two; then there is the Scotch mile of 5,928 feet, and the Irish mile of 6,720 feet; four various miles, every one of which is still in use. Then almost every country has its own standard mile. The Romans had their mil passuum, 1,000 paces, which must have been about 3,000 feet in length, unless we ascribe to Caesar's legionaries great stepping capacity. The German mile of to-day is 24,318 feet in length, or more than four and a half times as long as our mile.

The Dutch, the Danes and the Prussians enjoy a mile that is 15,440 feet long, three and one-half times the length of ours; and the Swiss get more exercise in walking one of their miles than we get in walking five miles, for their mile is 9,153 yards long, while ours is only 1,760 yards. The Italian mile is only a few feet longer than ours, the Roman mile is shorter, while the Tuscan and the Turkish mile are 150 yards longer. The Swedish mile is 7,341 yards long, and the Vienna post-mile is 8,796 yards in length. So here is a list of twelve different miles, and besides this there are other measures of distance, not counting the French kilometer, which is rather less than two-thirds of a mile.

The Brazilians have a millia that is one and one-fourth times as long as our mile; the Neapolitan miglio is about the same length; the Japanese ri, or mile, is two and one-half times ours; the Russian verst is five-eighths as long as our mile, while the Persian standard is a feskah, four and a half miles long, which is said to be equal to the parasang so familiar to the readers of Xenophon's "Anabasis." The distance indicated by the league also varies in different countries.—Ledger Monthly.

Speed of Railway Trains.

No comparison could be drawn a few years ago between the speed of British and foreign express trains. It was a case of Great Britain first, the rest nowhere. Foxhall Keene, just returned from England, is quoted in an interview as saying that "we can beat the English doing anything." Mr. Keene is no idle boaster. A few months ago a shooting team went to England to try conclusions at the traps. There was no contest. It was a case of America first, England nowhere. The fastest trains in the world and the fastest platform to platform runs no longer belong to England. The Scotch night express on the east and west coast routes are still marvels of endurance and speed, but they do not compare with the Empire State express, which makes the run from New York to Buffalo in eight hours and fifteen minutes, an inclusive rate of speed of 33.3 miles an hour.

Scarcely Up to Standard.

A bachelor who has spent his life in New York had business in one of the leading dry goods establishments lately for the first time. He said: "When I was coming down the stairs I stopped and looked at the throng of women. It was all confusion. They pushed each other; crowded to get a look at the same thing; spent their money as if it were a thing of no value."

"Did you fall in love with any of the pretty ladies?" said the person to whom he was speaking.

"Fall in love? No, indeed. I stood there and thanked the Lord that not one of 'em belonged to me."—Leslie's Weekly.

It isn't necessary for a man to sow wild oats; they come up along the path he travels.

White Hand

A Tale of the Early Settlers of Louisiana.

BY AUSTIN C. BURDICK

CHAPTER XI.—(Continued.)

Coqualla blushed and hung down her head when she saw the people gazing upon her, and her companion trembled violently. But they were not left long in suspense. Stung Serpent was absent; but the Great Sun stepped down from the elevated seat that he occupied, and from one of the attendants he took a bow and an arrow, and a crown of feathers, to which was affixed an oak twig. The latter he placed upon White Hand's head, and the weapons he placed in his hand. Then to Coqualla the old chief gave a laurel twig and an ear of corn.

"My son," then spoke the Great Sun, in a solemn and impressive tone, "I, as the eldest male relative of the bride, do now bestow her upon thee. Thou hast been crowned with the plumage of the soaring bird, which signifieth the power of command; you shall exercise in the household. The twig of oak tells us that the depth of no forest can prevent thee from procuring food in times of need; while the bow and arrow in thy hand signifieth that even unto death thou wilt protect her who is now given unto thee for a wife." Then the Great Sun turned to the bride: "Coqualla, in thy hand thou holdest the twig of laurel—the emblem of purity. So wilt thou ever remain pure and unsullied, that the green laurel may be no more pure than art thou. The ear of corn thou hast also assumed. Never let thy household want for food whilst thou art thus provided."

Then the chieftain resumed his seat, and the same old man who had led White Hand to the temple stepped forward and delivered a sort of sermon, after which the couple were hailed as man and wife. In the midst of these rejoicings, the entrance to the house was darkened, and in a moment more Stung Serpent stood within the place. He looked upon White Hand, and his brow darkened, but a close observer could have seen that the look was assumed.

"Who hath done this?" he demanded, in a loud tone.

"I, my brother," answered the Great Sun. "They loved each other well, and I gave thy child away."

Stung Serpent bowed his head a few moments, and when he looked up again his brow was clear.

"Then my promise is made void," he said: "for no man can harm the husband of his child. White Hand, thou art safe with us; but remember thine oath!"

"The husband of thy child will not break his promise," spoke the White Hand, solemnly.

"It is well. I am in season for the festivities."

And thereupon the festivities commenced, and they were kept up till late in the evening, and then the newly married couple were conducted to a dwelling that the king himself gave them. It was just back of the house of Stung Serpent, and was within the line of the great circle of dwellings, but its post of honor was marked by its nearness to the abode of the Great Sun.

After the newly married pair had been conducted to their dwelling, the youth felt a hand upon his arm, and on turning he saw the Great Sun.

"White Hand," he said, "follow me, for the Great Sun of the Natchez has much to say to thee."

Full of wonder, the youth followed the king from the place, but he did not fear, for there was only kindness in the tones of the monarch. On they went until they reached a gigantic oak that stood in the very center of the village, and here the Great Sun stopped.

"White Hand," he said, in a low, solemn tone, "thou hast sworn to my brother that thou wilt not betray thyself to thy countrymen, nor leave the village of the White Apple without our consent. Only six miles from here is the fort and village of the white man; so thou seest how great is the trust we repose in thee."

"Yet I will not break my word," said the youth, while a spirit of awe crept over him. There was something grand and sublime in the scene about him, and he could not shake off the impression that a sort of mystic force was being worked out in all this. The heavens were without a cloud, and the myriad stars were twinkling like tiny eyes of fire away off in the dark vault. The broad, smooth plain stretched off like a mystic lake, while the huts of the Natchez were dimly visible in the great circle.

"White Hand," resumed the dark monarch. "I do not think that the Great Spirit of our people is the same God that made the white man. The country away beyond the great salt lake, they tell me, is full of white men, and your God has given them laws not like our laws. They pray to their God for vengeance on the Natchez, and the dread vengeance comes. Like the swift storm at night, and like the bound of the beast of prey, it comes upon us. My son, thou canst pray?"

"Yes," murmured the youth.

"Then wilt thou not pray for the Natchez? Wilt thou not pray that He will send no more calamities upon us? Thou art good, and true, and noble. What sayest thou?"

A strange truth now flashed upon the youth's mind. The Indians, in their simple dread of the white man's God, had believed that if they could possess one of the true worshippers of that God, and persuade him to intercede for them, the calamities that resulted from the prayers of their enemies might be averted. Yet White Hand did not wonder, for he knew how simple were the ideas that the red men entertained of their own deity. And, moreover, he knew that the Indians had often heard the monks praying, and when he remembered how direct and common were the appeals thus made, he did not question the influence it must have upon those who were wont to regard deity as a being to be propitiated with gifts and outer show. The youth's first thought was to try and correct the error into which the chief had fallen; but when he came to reflect that in such a work he should have to uproot the prejudices of a lifetime, he resolved to do as was asked of him.

"Great and mighty king," said the youth, in a tone that gave evidence of his truth, "I think God will answer my prayers as quickly as those of any of my people, and so far as the Natchez are in the right, will I pray for them."

"And thou wilt tell him all the wrongs we suffer, and all the indignities that are heaped upon us?"

"I will," replied White Hand.

"Then thou shalt be the well-beloved of the Natchez. Let us return now, and as we go, I will tell thee more. The white chief at Rosalie is called Choptart. He is a bad man, and a liar. I dare not tell thee all the evil he has done. But he has robbed us of our cattle, and we can have no redress. He has encroached upon our lands, and we cannot drive him off. But O! the day of reckoning must come. Beware, my son, that thou lettest not thy sympathy run with these bad men, for the hour is nigh at hand—the hour of vengeance and retribution!"

The king spoke no more, only to bid White Hand good-night when they reached the dwelling, and soon the youth was with his princess. Truly his situation was a strange one, and that night he prayed long and fervently, but he dared not let his wife know all his prayer.

CHAPTER XII.

On the very evening that White Hand reached the village of the White Apple a party of Chickasaws stepped upon the northern shore of Lake Pontchartrain. They were ten in number, and with them was a prisoner, who now reclined against a small hickory tree. Her silken gown is torn and soiled by the thorns and bushes through which she has been led, and the thin shoes are worn through till the feet have become sore and bleeding; for the way she has come has been a hard one, and many sharp brambles have bestrewn the path. But she rests now. The flames dart up from a fire near at hand. Sick and faint, she sinks down upon the soft mossy bed at the foot of the tree, and ere long all her dangers and troubles are forgotten in sleep.

The fair prisoner ever and anon starts up with frightful dreams, until at length, when the night is far spent, she is aroused by strange sounds near at hand, amid which she can distinguish the clash of arms and the hum of angry voices. The idea of escape breaks upon her mind. A moment she gazes around, and she sees men in conference about her, with weapons drawn, and voices raised as if in anger. She moves only a step, and a hand is laid upon her shoulder. A stout Chickasaw holds her fast, and tells her she cannot escape. In a moment more the Chickasaw is pushed rudely aside, and Louise looks up into the moon-lit face of Simon Lobo!

"Ha!" he cries, with well-assumed astonishment, "and was my suspicion correct? Have I found my beloved thus dragged away by ruthless savages? Early this morning a runner brought the news to New Orleans that a white girl was being carried off by the Chickasaws, and that their trail bent towards the great lake. A mystic voice whispered thy name in my ear. Why it was I know not; but I started, and I have found thee. Look up, sweet Louise, for thou art safe. Thou art rescued!"

The maiden's first emotion seemed to be to shrink from the white man, but in a moment more she gave him her hand.

"And am I free from these savages?" she asked, gazing first into Simon's face and then upon the motley crew about her.

"Ay, thou art, Louise. Do you not see that they are all quelled? Heaven must have directed me to this spot. Fear no more, for thou shalt be safe with me."

Under any other circumstances, Louise might have been frantic with joy at such salutation, but now she was moved by so many conflicting doubts that the coming of the rescuers seemed to move her but little. By the bright moonlight she could see the crew about her, and they did not look like deadly enemies. No one was wounded, nor did any one appear to be hurt. To be sure, there had been the sound of strife, but it may have only been a mock battle after all. At any rate, so ran the maiden's thoughts, though she kept them to herself.

"Come," continued Simon, after waiting some moments for an answer that he did not receive—"come with me now. The savages will not dare to harm you more, nor will they dare molest us."

Louise suffered herself to be led to the shore of the lake, and there she found two boats in waiting. She had been seated in one of them when the chief of the Chickasaw party came down and called Simon back. A bitter smile stole over the maiden's face as she saw this, and her suspicions were well confirmed when she saw Lobo follow the red man up the bank. But the cousin returned in a few moments, and having seated himself by the side of Louise, the boats were manned and shoved off.

"The red dog wanted me to promise that I would not expose his crime to the Governor," said Simon, after the boats had got well into the lake. "I would have made them all prisoners, only that I feared you might be harmed in the melee. You did not notice how we came upon them, and what first occurred, did you?"

Simon gazed sharply into his companion's face as he thus spoke, as though he would read any suspicion she might hold.

"I saw nothing until I was grasped by the shoulder," she truthfully replied, "for I was sound asleep when you came."

"So I thought. But I will explain: One of the men who accompanied me knew the various trails that lead to the lake, and he guided us here. We landed, and we found the Indians asleep, all save one; but they were upon their feet by the time we were up with them, and I saw that some of them had guns. At that moment I espied you asleep upon the ground. In an instant I forbade my men to fire, for I feared you might be hit. I told the leader of the Indians that he was discovered, and that if he did not give up his prisoner, I would have the whole French force down upon his people before another sun had set. And I furthermore told him that if he would quietly deliver up the maiden, we would not harm him. A scuffle ensued between some of the red men and two of my companions, but we quickly stopped it, and the Indians agreed to give you up if we would let them depart in peace. I consented, and you know the rest. Was it not fortunate that I heard the report this morning?—and was it not very fortunate that heaven whispered to me that you might be the prisoner?"

"It was very fortunate," returned Louise.

"And perhaps you think it was strange," added Simon. "But yet I had some ground for the fear. The runner told me that the Indians were on the Tickfah trail, and I could think of no place from whence they could have brought a young white maiden captive in that direction save from the estate of our father. I say our father, for surely he has been a father to me. The more I thought of the matter, the more confirmed my fears became. A French ship lay in the river, and I easily hired some of her men to come with me. O, Louise, do you realize how great is the blessing thus fallen upon you? What must have been your fate had I not found you as I did?"

But the maiden did not reply. She was thinking how flimsy and improbable was the story her companion had told, and she wondered if he thought her such a simpleton as to believe all he said.

"Do you realize what a fate must have been yours?" Simon urged. "A death of torture, or a life of misery."

"I know the Indians are sometimes revengeful, but I do not think they would have murdered a defenseless girl," said Louise.

"Ah, you do not know them. You do not know these Chickasaws. They are monsters of cruelty!"

"And yet they have been very kind to me."

"Kind, Louise? Then why are you so pale and wan?—and why so feeble?"

"Because I am not well. I am sick. Last night I had a severe fever, but my captors prepared some medicine from roots that they found in the earth, and it relieved me at once."

"Ah, that was but to hold you up on your journey. But you are sick, even now. Let me fix a place for repose."

Simon spread a blanket upon the boat's bottom in the stern sheets, and fixed it so that Louise could lay her head upon one of the thwart, and when this was fixed, she availed herself of the opportunity for rest thus afforded, for she was in truth sick and faint, and her head ached. It was not all the result of mere fatigue or fright, but disease had absolutely fastened upon her—a slight cold, perhaps, at first, but now verging to a fever.

Yet Louise slept, and when she awoke, she found the sun shining down full upon her, and the boat had reached the southern shore. She was assisted to land, but she could not walk. However, horses were at hand, and when she was seated in the saddle, the party started across the land towards New Orleans, which they reached before noon. The place contained not more than a hundred dwellings, and those were humble and primitive in form. The territory of the town had been laid out into squares, sixty-six in number, of three hundred feet each. These squares were eleven in number upon the river, and six in depth; so that with all the obstacles of the natural state of the land, its geographical position had marked it out in the mind of its founder as the nucleus of a mighty city. His quick and comprehensive mind understood the advantages of the position in a commercial point of view, for he saw that here was the natural point between ocean and inland navigation.

To a low, wooden house on Bourbon street was Louise conducted, and at her own request she was at once shown to a bed, and a physician sent for. An old negro woman, named Loppa, came to wait upon her, and in a little while the physician came. He was an old man, and well skilled in drugs. He examined the patient's pulse, her tongue, and asked numerous questions, and then announced that with care she might be well in a very few days.

During the rest of that day and the following night, Louise saw no more of Simon Lobo. Her head ached much, but finally the old doctor's potions quieted the nervous action, and late in the evening she sank into a gentle slumber. On the following morning she felt much better, so that the doctor smiled when he came. In three days from that time she was fairly recovered from her disease, though she was very weak, partly from the severe shock she had received, and partly from the effects of the medicines she had taken. At all events, the physician deemed it not necessary to call again, and only ordered now that his patient's diet should be strictly attended to.

As Louise thus began to regain her strength, she wondered when Simon Lobo would take her home. She had asked him once, but had gained no direct answer.

"Bit Me; I'm Big Enough."

He wasn't very big, but he was a sturdy little chap with a face that bore the marks of much thinking and premature responsibility. I learned afterward that he was supporting a crippled mother and an invalid sister who had been left helpless in the world by the death of her father. He might have run away from home and evaded the responsibility, but he didn't think of it. He just sold papers.

At the loop on 15th street a crowd was gathered, waiting for the evening cars. A ragged little girl was selling flowers at the 15th street end of the waiting station when a man, rushing to catch his car, knocked her against the side of the building. Without stopping, probably not having noticed what he had done, he continued his rush, and the boy stepped in front of him, defiantly.

"Say, what do you want to knock a girl down for? Bit me; I'm big enough."

The man paused in surprise, and then glanced around. He saw the flower girl picking up her wares, and understood. Without a moment's hesitation he went back to her, gave her money enough to make her eyes sparkle with joy, and said:

"I'm sorry, my dear, that I hurt you. I didn't see." Then, turning to the boy, he continued: "You said you were big enough, young man, but you're a great deal bigger than you think. Men like you will have a lot to do with keeping this old world in a condition of self-respect."

Then he caught his car and the boy and the girl stood there wondering what he meant.—Denver Times.

Question Answered.

Yes, August Flower still has the largest sale of any medicine in the civilized world. Your mothers' and grandmothers' never thought of using anything else for indigestion or biliousness. Doctors were scarce, and they seldom heard of appendicitis, nervous prostration or heart failure etc. They used August Flower to clean out the system and stop fermentation of undigested food, regulate the action of the liver, stimulate the nervous and organic action of the system, and that is all they took when feeling dull and bad with headaches and other aches. You only need a few doses of Green's August Flower, in liquid form, to make you satisfied there is nothing serious the matter with you. Get Green's Prize Almanac.

SIGEL.

Herman Backbath, our town clerk, delivered the new school library books last week. If the present law, making it obligatory with every school district to purchase a certain number of books each year, remains in force much longer large school libraries will be common. District No. 5 has two bookcases, and a third one will soon be needed. District No. 1 has 184 library books, there being no room in the bookcase for the new books.

Many farmers have still a good share of their potatoes to dig. Recent rains have greatly set them back in this work, not only by keeping them out of the field, but by retarding their work while digging as well. Yet as the rains have not been followed by warm weather the potatoes do not rot in the ground, and most likely all of them will be secured before the frost can do them any harm.

The ground is almost too wet to plow and there is no need of new points on the plows. All those who are not done with digging potatoes and husking corn are beginning to feel uneasy.

The creamery man piled stakes for the season, which gives the cheese factory a much needed lift. Twenty cents they pay now for a pound of butter fat.

PITTSVILLE.

(From the Pilot.)

One of Ring's teams became frightened at the blowing of the mill whistle Monday morning, and started to run away, when Edwin Carley, the driver attempted to walk along the tongue and catch them by the bits. He fell to the ground, the wagon passing over him. He was picked up and carried to the office and Dr. Houghton sent for, when it was found that several of his ribs were fractured, and his face quite bruised. He is now getting along as well as could be expected, under the careful treatment of Dr. Houghton.

Walter Shumway brought in a half bushel of potatoes last Thursday which were a little the finest of anything that has been shown here this fall. Most of them weighed from one and one-half to two and three-fourths pounds. A real estate man from Rockford, Ill., saw them and gave him $1.50 for them saying that those potatoes were cheap at that price.

Ed Troupe was awarded first prize last Saturday on Arpin's marsh for picking cranberries on the marsh. He picked three and a half bushels of berries, or a half bushel more than any other picker, which is remarkable considering that he has only one hand to work with.
